as in the other new Australian colonies there were no civil or political restrictions on the Jewish community. With the establishment of Melbourne Jewish settlers were required to create new communal frameworks and the religious bodies of an active Jewish life. The community's structure and the institutions they founded were a pragmatic response to the necessities of communal formation and the realities of maintaining Judaism within this colonial outpost. As with other Jewish communities in the large centres of the world they responded to the freedoms of an emancipated society while the political and social environment of a new city such as Melbourne provided a unique set of opportunities. Unlike in other cities where Jewish property ownership was restricted here Jews could live and work where they chose becoming from the first land sales investors in property. Subsequently as the city expanded as developers and builders they influenced the formation of the urban fabric while their intellectual and economic connections brought new political and intellectual ideas and networks to the colonial experience.

In Their Merit Rodney Gouttman, 2015-03-06 Australia entered the Great War of 1914-18 on the coattails of her imperial mother Great Britain. Some 420 000 of her citizens fought in the islands off New Guinea, Gallipoli, the Western Front and the Middle East. Among them was a relatively large chunk of the country's small Jewish population. The precise number remains unknown since many enlisted as Christians. The Jewish story of World War I is far more complex than the current communal narrative monopolised as it is by the superb military leadership of General Sir John Monash and the avowals of passionate loyalty of Australian Jewry to king, country and empire. It is claimed that this was manifest in its relatively large enlistment and war effort on the home front. At all times an edgy Anglo-Australian Jewish leadership was looking over its shoulder worried by possible accusations of disloyalty. The sketchy account of the Australian Jewish involvement in World War I is due to a lack of evidence from that era and little enthusiasm for collecting whatever was available subsequently. Much of what does exist lacks a grassroots Jewish voice except for a few diaries and letters. Nonetheless it is most likely that the capacity of Jewish communal leaders to influence the average Australian Jew's attitude to enlistment or home front activities was minimal. One matter is certain and that is that a strong belief in social integration helped prevent the formation of any communal organisation to care for ill and wounded Jewish veterans.

The Forgotten Fifties John Murphy, Judith Smart, 1997. Some of Australia's leading historians present new perspectives on social and cultural life in the 1950s. The 1950s is usually treated in the popular media as a metaphor for an Australia that was complacent, monocultural, banal and domesticated. On the other hand historical writing about the decade has long been dominated by accounts of political and foreign policy conflict. The Labor Split the Cold War and the seemingly endless long summer of Robert Menzies This collection assembles some of Australia's leading historians to present new perspectives on the 1950s Focusing on social and cultural themes they reveal a decade full of contradictions which belie the common simplistic accounts of the time Ranging from the education of the young Barry Humphries to the idea of an Australian identity in the lead up to the 1956 Olympics these essays also include the personal recollections of three leading historians providing a lively and critical insight into the Australia of the period Drawing out themes such as style sexuality modernism the suburbs travel writing and immigrant assimilation the authors excavate the experience of everyday life and the attitudes that characterised the 1950s They present a past that despite having shaped our lives continues to be disputed in contemporary Australia A Distant Grief Bart Ziino, 2007 Sixty thousand Australians died during the First World War This book is the first major study to examine the roles of war graves and cemeteries in private grief and mourning through archival research of the Commonwealth War Graves Commission the organization responsible for commemorating the million soldiers of the British Empire who died in the war A Distant Grief reorients and enriches international discussion of reactions to death and commemoration during and after the First World War The author Bart Ziino has written on war memorials Gallipoli and the Australian memory of war The thesis on which this book is based won the 2005 Australian Historical Association's Serle Award for the best thesis in Australian History
