Being Maori in the City Natacha Gagné,2013-01-21 Indigenous peoples around the world have been involved in struggles for decolonization self determination and recognition of their rights and the Māori of Aotearoa New Zealand are no exception Now that nearly 85% of the Māori population have their main place of residence in urban centres cities have become important sites of affirmation and struggle Grounded in an ethnography of everyday life in the city of Auckland Being Maori in the City is an investigation of what being Māori means today One of the first ethnographic studies of Māori urbanization since the 1970s this book is based on almost two years of fieldwork living with Māori families and more than 250 hours of interviews In contrast with studies that have focused on indigenous elites and official groups and organizations Being Māori in the City shines a light on the lives of ordinary individuals and families Using this approach Natacha Gagné adroitly underlines how indigenous ways of being are maintained and even strengthened through change and openness to the larger society Histories, Power and Loss Andrew Sharp,P.G. McHugh,2015-12-29 From the 1970s onwards Māori began a concerted effort to confront Pkeh with the wrongs done during the colonisation of New Zealand. They made highly contested claims for reparation of past wrongs and the restitution of their political power putting history at the heart of their claims. This process of drawing on the past is examined by a wide range of writers both Māori and Pkeh and all highly respected thinkers in history, law and philosophy. Histories of Power and Loss offers an incisive analysis that is relevant to any country where political and legal relations between indigenous peoples and colonisers are being scrutinised.

Mixed Race Identities in Asia and the Pacific Zarine L. Rocha, 2015-10-08 Mixed race is becoming an important area for research and there is a growing body of work in the North American and British contexts. However, understandings and experiences of mixed race across different countries and regions are not often explored in significant depth. New Zealand and Singapore provide important contexts for investigation as two multicultural yet structurally divergent societies. Within these two countries, mixed race describes a particularly interesting label for individuals of mixed Chinese and European parentage. This book explores the concept of mixed race for people of mixed Chinese and European descent, looking at how being Chinese and/or European can mean many different things in different contexts. By looking at different communities in Singapore and New Zealand, it investigates how individuals of mixed heritage fit into or are excluded from these communities. Increasingly, individuals of mixed ancestry are opting to identify outside of traditionally defined racial categories, posing a challenge to systems of racial classification and to sociological understandings of race. As case studies, Singapore and New Zealand provide key examples of the complex relationship between state categorization and individual identities. The book explores the divergences between identity and classification and the ways in which identity labels affect experiences of mixed race in everyday life. Personal stories reveal the creative and flexible ways in which people cross boundaries and the everyday negotiations between classification, heritage, experience and nation in defining identity. The study is based on qualitative research including in-depth interviews with people of mixed heritage in both countries. Filling an important gap in the literature by using an Asia-Pacific dimension, this study of race and ethnicity will appeal to students and scholars of mixed race studies, ethnicity, Chinese diaspora and cultural anthropology.

Towards Successful Schooling (RLE Edu L Sociology of Education) Hugh Lauder, Cathy Wylie, 2012-05-23 The editors have compiled this critical and comparative study of changes which took place in the New Zealand education system in the second half of the twentieth century. For other Western societies who have felt the impact of New Right policies, the New Zealand case is interesting because it provides some indication of how policies of decentralization in education might be used to develop egalitarian and democratic educational policies. In recent years, there have been major changes to educational systems in the Western world. Often these changes have been justified by reference to successful educational practices in other countries. However, it is not always possible simply to abstract educational practices from one context and apply them in another successfully Moreover claims that policies in one country are more successful than those in another have to be treated cautiously there are always problems in making valid comparisons between the educational performances of different countries It is important therefore that critical and comparative studies are made of educational systems which take full account of the contexts in which they are embedded Multiculturalism in the British Commonwealth Richard T. Ashcroft,Mark Bevir,2019-07-12 A free open access ebook is available upon publication Learn more at www.luminosoa.org Multiculturalism as a distinct form of liberal democratic governance gained widespread acceptance after World War II but in recent years this consensus has been fractured Multiculturalism in the British Commonwealth examines cultural diversity across the postwar Commonwealth situating modern multiculturalism in its national international and historical contexts Bringing together practitioners from across the humanities and social sciences to explore the legal political and philosophical issues involved these essays address common questions What is postwar multiculturalism Why did it come about How have social actors responded to it In addition to chapters on Australia Britain Canada and New Zealand this volume also covers India Malaysia Nigeria Singapore and Trinidad tracing the historical roots of contemporary dilemmas back to the intertwined legacies of imperialism and liberalism In so doing it demonstrates that multiculturalism has implications that stretch far beyond its current formulations in public and academic discourse

Precarity Shioh Groot,2017-09-01 Leading UK economist Guy Standing has referred to the precariat as a class in the making The Precariat are our fellow citizens be they poor elderly disabled homeless estranged from their cultural communities refugees engaged in casual work who lead lives of uncertainty dependency powerlessness perilousness and insufficiency They are the outcome of the gradual dismantling of the welfare state and the withering of union representation They are also the victims of the changing nature of work This important book moves beyond the world of labour to identify and illustrate other forms of precarity in New Zealand including the lack of opportunities for cultural expression and the struggle to be safe It focuses on New Zealand's emerging class not to further vilify it but rather to place its members lived experience in plain sight As the editors say It is time that all New Zealanders understood the reality of what many of our citizens endure in the struggle to make ends meet and live dignified lives
