Resource Based Industrialization Sowing The Oil In Eight Developing Countries:

Resource-based Industrialization Richard M. Auty, 1990 This book is the first cross country analysis of resource based industrialization RBI a controversial industrialization strategy favored by developing countries in the 1970s It examines the expectations and the actual experience of RBI in the oil exporting countries Bahrain Cameroon Indonesia Malaysia Nigeria Saudi Arabia Trinidad and Tobago and Venezuela Auty shows that these countries underestimated the risks associated with RBI s large capital intensive projects and that many RBI plants were poorly implemented and became uncompetitive when prices fell below forecast levels However Auty argues given its long gestation period and link to volatile energy markets RBI does have considerable long term potential provided conditions of financial restructuring and macro and micro economic efficiency are met Scholars and students in development economics and advisers and consultants in and to developing country governments will find this important analysis covers a variety of country sizes and efficiency constraints offering a broad range of examples of RBI

Understanding and Avoiding the Oil Curse in Resource-rich Arab Economies Ibrahim Elbadawi, Hoda Selim, 2016-07-14 For over eighty years the Arab region has derived massive wealth from its natural resources yet the region s economies remain little diversified while the oil market is experiencing major structural shifts with the advent of shale gas Moreover the resource itself is eventually exhaustible Under these conditions economic prosperity cannot be sustainable The critical question is how can the countries of this region escape the oil curse In this volume leading economists argue that the curse is not a predestined outcome but a result of weak institutions and bad governance A variety of analytical perspectives and examination of various international case studies leads to the conclusion that natural resources can only spur economic development when combined with sound political institutions and effective economic governance This volume with its unique focus on the Arab region will be an important reference for researchers and policymakers alike

Timber Booms and Institutional Breakdown in Southeast Asia Michael L. Ross, 2001-01-08 Scholars have long studied how institutions emerge and become stable But why do institutions sometimes break down In this book Michael L Ross explores the breakdown of the institutions that govern natural resource exports in developing states He shows that these institutions often break down when states receive positive trade shocks unanticipated windfalls Drawing on the theory of rent seeking he suggests that these institutions succumb to a problem he calls rent seizing the predatory behavior of politicians who seek to supply rent to others and who purposefully dismantle institutions that restrain them Using case studies of timber booms in Indonesia Malaysia and the Philippines he shows how windfalls tend to trigger rent seizing activities that may have disastrous consequences for state institutions and for the government of natural resources More generally he shows how institutions can collapse when they have become endogenous to any rent seeking process The Indonesian Production Sharing Contract: An Investor's Perspective Tengku Nathan Machmud, 2000-07-12 The model contract for oil and gas development known as the Production Sharing Contract PSC originated in Indonesia in 1966 and enjoyed over a decade of successful implementation with minor adjustments in several oil producing countries In more recent years however numerous problems have arisen as changes in economic realities have driven the level of private investment down This penetrating study the only one of its kind uses legal analysis as well as historical data to pinpoint the reasons for the initial success of the PSC and for its subsequent and persistent frustrations for investors The author first examines the original Indonesian contract along with the variants adopted in Malaysia and the People's Republic of China and then proceeds to an in depth analysis of the main clauses and their amendments and execution in all three countries Taking into account various commissioned surveys and emerging policies and strategies espoused by both governments and industry representatives he concludes with a detailed proposal for an overhauled contract that allows for meaningful adjustments or even renegotiation when the balance of interests between parties changes substantially Focusing as it does on some central issues in global economic development The Indonesian Production Sharing Contract will be of great value to lawyers multinational corporate executives and policymakers far beyond the Asia Pacific region Environmental Resources A.S. Development Theory and the Economics of Growth Jaime Ros, 2001 Why are some countries richer than others Why do some economies grow so much faster than others do Do economies tend to converge at similar levels of per capita income Or is catching up simply impossible These questions have vast implications for human welfare After a period of lack of interest in growth theory they are back on the research agenda of mainstream economics They have also been at the heart of development economics since its inception some decades ago This book endeavors to answer such questions by blending classical contributions to development theory with recent developments in the economics of growth The unifying theme is that early theoretical insights and accumulated empirical knowledge of development economics have much to offer to research in the theory and empirics of economic growth With the help of a number of recent contributions the ideas and insights of the classical literature in development economics can be given simple and rigorous formulations Together they amount to an approach to growth theory that can overcome the long recognized empirical shortcomings of neoclassical growth economics while being free from the objections that can be raised against the new brand of endogenous growth theory In addition to an original thesis on the contribution that early development theory can make to the research program of modern growth economics the book provides professional and research economists and graduate students with an evaluation of the strengths and limitations of the different strands of inquiry in the modern economics of growth In addition it presents findings on comparative growth performance across countries Jaime Ros is Professor of Economics and Faculty Fellow of the Helen Kellogg Institute of International Studies University of Notre Dame Environment and Ecology in the History of Economic Thought Vitor Eduardo
