Response Of Different Species To Total Body Irradiation:

Response of Different Species to Total Body Irradiation J.J. Broerse, T.J. Macvittie, 2012-12-06 J J Broerse Radiobiological Institute TNO Rijswijk The Netherlands and T J MacVittie Armed Forces Radiobiology Research Institute Bethesda MD USA During the past decade relatively few new studies have been initiated on the response of different species to high dose total body irradiation For information on the LD₅₀ 30d the dose which produces 50 percent lethality within 30 days one is generally referred to the older literature e g Bond Fliedner and Archambeau 1965 Comparison of experimental data reveals considerable variations in LD₅₀ values even after total body irradiation with conventional X rays ranging from 4 to 6 Gy in the monkey 7.1 to 9 Gy in the rat and from 6.4 to 9 Gy in the mouse see also Hall 1978 Part of the discrepancy in the LD₅₀ values can possibly be attributed to inadequacies in the dosimetry procedures and exposure arrangements employed As far as clinical experience is concerned there is now an appreciable amount of information available about the effect of total body irradiation as a conditioning treatment for bone marrow transplantation in patients suffering from leukaemia or aplastic anaemia The results from different centres including the incidence of complications such as radiation pneumonitis are considerably different This can partly be connected with the application of different radiation schedules large single dose versus fractionated or protracted irradiation

Response of Different Species to Total Body Irradiation J. J. Broerse, T. J. Macvittie, 1984-10-31 Radiopathology of Organs and Tissues Eberhard Scherer, Christian Streffer, Klaus-Rüdiger Trott, 2012-12-06 The biologic effects of radiation on normal tissues and tumors represent a complex area for investigation These effects are of far reaching consequence to the diagnostic radiologist and the radiation oncologist having a significant impact not only in concepts relative to radiation protection but also in concepts relative to tumor biology and its response to radiation injury The volume edited by SCHERER STREFFER and TROTT represents an extension of basic radiation biology data into the effects of radiation in producing pathology in organs and tissues The data presented by the multiple authors involved in this text cover essentially all tissues in the body with specific definition of radiopathology changes and their impact on clinical care of the patient This volume represents an important and significant contribution toward a better understanding of these effects and the pathology produced by radiations L W BRADY H P HEILMANN F HEUCK M W DONNER Philadelphia Hamburg Stuttgart Baltimore Preface This book represents an attempt to describe the clinical radiobiology of complications arising in different organs after radiotherapy of cancer patients Since by their very nature malignant tumors infiltrate the organ in which they have arisen and the neighboring tissues curative radiotherapy requires the planned irradiation of considerable amounts of healthy but potentially or microscopically involved normal tissues and organs with the full target dose This may lead to early or late normal tissue radiation injury

Radiation Toxicology Jolyon H Hendry, 1995-11-30 This text covers every injury to the bone marrow which can occur from low and high doses of ionising radiation for example X rays gamma rays and especially damaging types of radiation such as alpha rays

Human

Radiation Injury Dennis C. Shrieve, Jay Loeffler, 2012-03-28 Human Radiation Injury is a concise but thorough presentation of known toxicities of radiation exposure in humans. This unique text is the only single reference available that studies the risks to humans from medical, environmental, and accidental or terrorist-related exposure to radiation. The chapters cover modern understanding of the molecular and cellular events involved in radiation injury, the known dose-effect relationships for human organ systems, and a full discussion of normal tissue toxicity related to therapeutic radiation. Recommended guidelines are outlined, and the best available treatments following injury are also detailed. A companion website offers the fully searchable text and an image bank.

Treatment of Radiation Injuries Doris Browne, 2013-11-11 The proliferation of radioactive materials in industry, in diagnostic and therapeutic medicine, in scientific and medical research, in the military, and as a source of energy has increased the likelihood of accidental exposure to ionizing radiation. Further, the number of individuals exposed in accidents such as Chernobyl, U.S.S.R. Goiania, Brazil, and San Salvador, El Salvador, underscores the potential for large-scale radiation accidents. Because of these accidents, health care providers have found themselves treating patients with acute radiation injuries and subsequent complications. Often the radiation injuries are combined with burns or other trauma, and the infectious and immune complications associated with such injuries. The treatment of victims of these accidents has provided important information about the medical management of radiation casualties. However, development of techniques to improve the diagnosis and treatment of radiation injuries, to collect follow-up data on survivors, and to determine the long-term effects of uncontrolled radiation exposure must continue. The Armed Forces Radiobiology Research Institute, Bethesda, Maryland, and its Medical Radiobiology Advisory Team sponsored the First Consensus Development Conference on the Treatment of Radiation Injuries in Washington, DC, on May 10-13, 1989. The proceedings of the conference are presented in this volume, which we hope will serve as a reference for clinicians and basic research scientists who require knowledge of the latest developments in the diagnosis and treatment of radiation injuries. This conference was designed specifically to address the areas of hematopoietic injury, infectious complications, and combined injury.

Terrestrial Space Radiation and Its Biological Effects Percival D. McCormack, Charles E. Swenberg, Horst Bucker, 2012-12-06 This volume is based on the proceedings of an Advanced Study Institute (ASI) sponsored by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), held October 1987 in Corfu, Greece. The Institute received financial support from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), U.S. Armed Forces Radiobiology Research Institute, U.S. Department of Energy, U.S. Deutsche Forschungs- und Versuchsanstalt für Luft und Raumfahrt e.V., Karlsruhe, Germany. The advent of the shuttle era is providing fresh impetus for large space ventures such as communication centers, solar power stations, astronomical observatories, orbiting factories, and space-based radar. Such ventures will rely heavily on an extensive and prolonged human presence in space, doing in-orbit construction, maintenance, and operation. Among the advantages of location in space are the near-zero gravity environment, commanding location, and the reception of solar energy and astronomical signals unattenuated by the atmosphere Central to long term manned space missions are the problems associated with the effects of exposure to ionizing radiations on humans Manned space mis sions in the past have encountered relatively benign radiation environ ments because of their very short duration and orbit configuration However crew stay time of up to a year has been recently achieved by the Soviet space program and Mars missions lasting several years are under serious consideration Radiation Effects and Tolerance, Normal Tissue J.
