and Justice is the first academic book to focus on crime fiction by anglophone Caribbean writers. It explores how contemporary writers experiment with the crime genre in order to convey, contextualize and comment on crime and justice in Caribbean countries. Lucy Evans reads crime fiction as a versatile mode of writing that can be politically engaged and that in a Caribbean context can expose power structures embedded in the region's multi-layered history of colonial conquest, genocide of Indigenous populations, plantation agriculture, transatlantic slavery and indentured labour. This book covers fiction set in Trinidad and Tobago, Jamaica, Guyana, Barbados, Grenada and Haiti, discussing novels by Elizabeth Nunez, Jacob Ross, Marlon James, Harischandra Khemraj, Esther Figueroa, Edwidge Danticat, Cherie Jones and several others. Evans considers how fiction by anglophone Caribbean writers not only reflects upon the social realities of crime and crime control in the Caribbean but also at times contests or complicates scholarly, popular and legal perspectives. She argues that through their engagement with the crime genre, these writers raise pressing questions about what constitutes crime and justice in a Caribbean context and about accountability. Looking beyond the traditional focus of crime fiction and criminology on individual acts of wrongdoing, their fiction highlights systemic social harms rooted in the region's colonial past. Reading crime fiction through the lens of criminological research, Crime Fiction in the Caribbean brings the study of literary writing into scholarly debate on crime in the Caribbean. At the same time, it extends the global turn in crime fiction studies, focusing on a region that has been sidelined even in studies which examine the genre's international dimensions. Eureka Chad Orzel, 2014-12-09 When it comes to science, too often people say, "I just don't have the brains for it" and leave it at that. Why is science so intimidating, and why do people let themselves feel this way? What makes one person a scientist and another disinclined even to learn how to read graphs? The idea that scientists are people who wear lab coats and are somehow smarter than the rest of us is a common yet dangerous misconception that puts science on an intimidating pedestal. How did science become so divorced from everyday experience? In Eureka, science popularizer Chad Orzel argues that even the people who are most forthright about hating science are doing science often without even knowing it. Orzel shows that science is central to the human experience: every human can think like a scientist and regularly does so in the course of everyday activities. The common misconception is that science is a body of boring, abstract, often mathematical facts. In truth, science is a process. Looking at the world, thinking about what makes it work, testing your mental model by comparing it to reality, and telling others about your results—all things that people do daily. By revealing the connection between the everyday activities that people do (solving crossword puzzles, playing sports, or even watching mystery shows on television) and the processes used to make great scientific discoveries, Eureka shows that this process is one everybody uses regularly and something that anyone can do. Deception Randy Alcorn, 2008-04-15 Messin with me, s like wearin' cheese underwear down rat alley. Ollie Chandler, homicide detective, Ollie Chandler has seen it all. Done more than he cares to admit. But when he's called to investigate the murder of a Portland State University professor, he finds himself going places he's never gone before. Places he never wanted to go Because all the evidence is pointing to one horrific conclusion The murderer is someone in his own department That s not the worst of it though Ollie has nagging doubts about himself Where was he during the time of the murder Joined by journalist Clarence Abernathy and their friend Jake Woods Ollie pushes the investigation forward Soon all three are drawn deep into corruption and political tensions that threaten to destroy them and anyone who tries to help But they re in too deep to quit They ve got no choice They have to follow the evidence to the truth No matter how ugly or dangerous it gets A gripping story of murder and spiritual struggle Deception proves as never before the truth of Ollie s first law Things are often not what they appear
