Pasles, 2021-01-12 Few American lives have been as celebrated or as closely scrutinized as that of Benjamin Franklin Yet until now Franklin s biographers have downplayed his interest in mathematics at best portraying it as the idle musings of a brilliant and ever restless mind In Benjamin Franklin s Numbers Paul Pasles reveals a side of the iconic statesman scientist and writer that few Americans know his mathematical side In fact Franklin indulged in many areas of mathematics including number theory geometry statistics and economics In this generously illustrated book Pasles gives us the first mathematical biography of Benjamin Franklin He draws upon previously unknown sources to illustrate Franklin s genius for numbers as never before Magic squares and circles were a lifelong fascination of Franklin's. Here for the first time Pasles gathers every one of these marvelous creations together in one place. He explains the mathematics behind them and Franklin's hugely popular Poor Richard's Almanac which featured such things as population estimates and a host of mathematical digressions. Pasles even includes optional math problems that challenge readers to match wits with the bespectacled Founding Father himself. Written for a general audience, this book assumes no technical skills beyond basic arithmetic. Benjamin Franklin's Numbers is a delightful blend of biography, history, and popular mathematics. If you think you already know Franklin's story, this entertaining and richly detailed book will make you think again.

Magic in the Landscape Nigel Pennick, 2020-05-05. Learn to cultivate a traditional beneficial relationship with the land by embracing the forgotten practices of our ancestors. Details the ancient art of geomancy and Earth magic, including how to work with ley lines, astrology, and the four directions to honor a space and make it a place of power. Explores the magic of the land around us and how our ancestors interacted with Earth energies and the forces of Nature. Discusses the power of boundaries and magic circles, the proper feng shui of graveyards and cemeteries, and magically powerful places such as crossroads, fairgrounds, and the mystic triangles found in no man's lands. Our ancestors were deeply aware of the magical power of their local landscape, no matter where they lived. Every interaction with their environment, from building to farming to the layout of ancient cities, took into account terrestrial energies, ancestral memory, and the many seen and unseen presences in Nature. They developed sophisticated procedures for orienting their living spaces and respectfully working with the magic of the landscape. Yet much of the art of geomancy and of working with the forces of Nature has been forgotten by modern builders, architects, foresters, gardeners, and homeowners. The treatment of land as mere property has led to a loss of its meaning for those who dwell upon it. Our landscape has become disenchanted. In this book, geomancy expert and scholar Nigel Pennick details the ancient and sacred practices of geomancy and Earth magic and reveals how we can reenchant and reconnect to the sacred landscape that surrounds us. Whether you live rurally in the suburbs or in cities, Pennick begins with a vivid look at our modern wasteland and what he calls the ensouled world, with specific examples from Britain and Iceland of our ancestors' way of perceiving the world they lived in. Exploring the art of geomancy, he examines how its techniques work with ley lines, astrology, and the old understanding of the four directions and the eight winds to honor a space and make it a place of power. He looks at the power of boundaries and magic circles, including laying ghosts and dismissing spirits, as well as the proper feng shui for cemeteries and graveyards. The author then takes the reader back into the traditional landscape to discuss magically powerful places such as crossroads, the occult nature of the fairground, and the mystic triangles found in what are popularly known as no man's lands. Revealing how the landscape can be reenchanting, Pennick shows how the magic of place is a living system that each of us can interact with.
