Consuming Stories Rebecca Peabody,2021-02-23 In Consuming Stories Rebecca Peabody uses the work of contemporary American artist Kara Walker to investigate a range of popular storytelling traditions with roots in the nineteenth century and ramifications in the present Focusing on a few key pieces that range from a wall size installation to a reworked photocopy in an artist's book and from a theater curtain to a monumental sculpture Peabody explores a significant yet neglected aspect of Walker's production her commitment to examining narrative depictions of race gender power and desire Consuming Stories considers Walker's sustained visual engagement with literary genres such as the romance novel the neo slave narrative and the fairy tale and with internationally known stories including Roots Beloved and Uncle Tom's Cabin Walker's interruption of these familiar works along with her generative use of the familiar in unexpected and destabilizing ways reveals the extent to which genre based narrative conventions depend on specific representations of race especially when aligned with power and desire Breaking these implicit rules makes them visible and in turn highlights viewers reliance on them for narrative legibility As this study reveals Walker's engagement with narrative continues beyond her early silhouette work as she moves into media such as film video and sculpture Peabody also shows how Walker uses her tools and strategies to unsettle cultural histories abroad when she works outside the United States These stories Peabody reminds us not only change the way people remember history but also shape the entertainment industry Ultimately Consuming Stories shifts the critical conversation away from the visual legacy of historical racism toward the present day role of the entertainment industry and its consumers in processes of racialization

Architecture and Urbanism in Modern Korea Inha Jung, 2013-07-31 Although modernization in Korea started more than a century later than in the West it has worked as a prominent ideology throughout the past century in particular it has brought radical changes in Korean architecture and cities Traditional structures and ways of life have been thoroughly uprooted in modernity's continuous negation of the past This book presents a comprehensive overview of architectural development and urbanization in Korea within the broad framework of modernization Twentieth century Korean architecture and cities form three distinctive periods The first defined as colonial modern occurred between the early twentieth century and 1945 when Western civilization was transplanted to Korea via Japan and a modern way of life albeit distorted began taking shape The second is the so called developmental dictatorship period Between 1961 and 1988 the explosive growth of urban populations resulted in large scale construction booms and architects delved into modern identity through the locality of traditional architecture The last period began in the mid 1990s and may be defined as one of modernization settlement and a transition to globalization With city populations leveling out urbanization and architecture came to be viewed from new perspectives Inha Jung however contends that what is more significant is the identification of elements that have remained unchanged Jung identifies continuities that have been formed by long standing relationships between humans and their built environment and despite rapid modernization are still deeply rooted in the Korean way of life For this reason in the twentieth century regionalism exerted a great influence on Korean architects Various architectural and urban principles that Koreans developed over a long period while adapting to the natural environment have provided important foundations for architects works By exploring these sources this carefully researched and amply illustrated book makes an original contribution to defining modern identity in Korea s architecture housing and urbanism
