Nominal Classification In Aboriginal Australia Studies In Language Companion:

Nominal Classification in Aboriginal Australia Mark Harvey, Nicholas Reid, 1997-01-01 This volume aims to extend both the range of analyses and the database on nominal classification systems Previous analyses of nominal classification systems have focussed on two areas the semantics of the classification system and the role of the system in discourse In many nominal classification systems there appear to be a significant percentage of nominals with an arbitrary classification There is a considerable body of literature aimed at elucidating the semantic bases of classification in such systems thereby reducing the degree of apparent arbitrariness Contributors to this volume continue this line of enquiry but also propose that arbitrariness in itself has a role from a wider socio cultural perspective Previous analyses of the discourse role of classification systems posit that they play a significant role in referential tracking For the languages surveyed in this volume contributors propose that reference instantiation is an equally significant function and indeed that reference instantiation and tracking cannot be properly divided from one another This volume provides detailed information on classification in a number of northern Australian languages whose systems are otherwise poorly known

The Dynamics of Nominal Classification Ruth Singer, 2016-02-22 The use of grammatical gender in the Australian language Mawng calls into question prevailing ideas about the functions of nominal classification systems Mawng's gender system has a strong semantic basis and plays an important role in the construction of meaning in discourse Gender agreement in verbs is frequently lexicalized creating idioms called lexicalised agreement verbs that are structurally similar to noun verb idioms This book will be of interest to anyone interested in nominal classification or cross linguistic approaches to idioms

Verb Classification in Australian Languages William B. McGregor, 2013-06-10 This book deals with systems of verb classification in Australian Aboriginal languages with particular focus on languages of the north west It proposes a typology of the systems according to their main formal and semantic characteristics It also makes some proposals concerning the historical origins and grammaticisation of these systems and suggestions regarding the grammatical relations involved In addition an attempt is made to situate the phenomenon of verb classification within the context of related verbal phenomena such as serial verb constructions nominal incorporation and complex predicates

A Grammar of Gaagudju Mark Harvey, 2011-07-22 Gaagudju is a previously undescribed and now nearly extinct language of northern Australia This grammar provides an overall description of the language Australian languages generally show a high degree of structural similarity to one another Gaagudju conforms to some of the common Australian patterns yet diverges significantly from others Thus while it has a standard Australian phonological inventory its prosodic systems differ from those of most Australian languages with stressed and unstressed syllables showing marked differences in realisation Like many northern languages it has complex systems of both prefixation and suffixation to nominals and verbs Prefixation provides information about nominal classification 4 classes mood and pronominal cross reference Subjects Objects and Indirect Objects Suffixation provides information about case tense and aspect As in many languages there is a clear distinction between productive and unproductive morphology Gaagudju differs from most Australian languages in that a considerable amount of its morphology is unproductive showing complex and irregular allomorphic variation Gaagudju is like most Australian languages in that it may be described as a free word order language However word order is not totally free and strictly ordered phrasal compounding structures are significant e g in the formation of denominal verbs

The Oxford Handbook of Polysynthesis Michael Fortescue, Marianne Mithun, Nicholas Evans, 2017-09-28 This handbook offers an extensive crosslinguistic and cross theoretical survey of polysynthetic languages in which single multi morpheme verb forms can express what would be whole sentences in English These languages and the problems they raise for linguistic analyses have long featured prominently in language descriptions and yet the essence of polysynthesis remains under discussion right down to whether it delineates a distinct coherent type rather than an assortment of frequently co occurring traits Chapters in the first part of the handbook relate polysynthesis to other issues central to linguistics such as complexity the definition of the word the nature of the lexicon idiomaticity and to typological features such as argument structure and head marking Part two contains areal studies of those geographical regions of the world where polysynthesis is particularly common such as the Arctic and Sub Arctic and northern Australia The third part examines diachronic topics such as language contact and language obsolescence while part four looks at acquisition issues in different polysynthetic languages Finally part five contains detailed grammatical descriptions of over twenty languages which have been characterized as polysynthetic with special attention given to the presence or absence of potentially criterial features

Nominal Classification in Aboriginal Australia Mark Harvey, Nicholas Reid, 1997-09-02 This volume aims to extend both the range of analyses and the database on nominal classification systems Previous analyses of nominal classification systems have focussed on two areas the semantics of the classification system and the role of the system in discourse In many nominal classification systems there appear to be a significant percentage of nominals with an arbitrary classification There is a considerable body of literature aimed at elucidating the semantic bases of classification in such systems thereby reducing the degree of apparent arbitrariness Contributors to this volume continue this line of enquiry but also propose that arbitrariness in itself has a role from a wider socio cultural perspective Previous analyses of the discourse role of classification systems posit that they play a significant role in referential tracking For the languages surveyed in this volume contributors propose that reference instantiation is an equally significant function and indeed that reference instantiation and tracking cannot be properly divided from one another This volume provides detailed information on classification in a number of northern Australian languages whose systems are otherwise poorly known

The Languages and Linguistics of Australia Harold Koch, Rachel Nordlinger, 2014-08-19 The Languages and Linguistics of Australia A Comprehensive Guide is part of the multi volume reference work on the languages and linguistics of the continents of the world The volume provides a thorough overview of Australian languages including their linguistic structures their genetic relationships and issues of language maintenance and revitalisation Australian English Aboriginal English and other contact varieties are also discussed Ontolinguistics Andrea C. Schalley, Dietmar Zaefferer, 2008-08-22 Current progress in linguistic theorizing is more and more informed by cross linguistic including cross modal investigation Comparison of languages relies crucially on the concepts that can be coded with similar effort in all languages These concepts are part of every language user s ontology the network of cross connected conceptualizations the mind uses in coping with the world Assuming that language comparability is rooted in the comparability of user ontologies the idea of the present volume is to further instigate progress in linguistics by looking behind the interface with the conceptual intentional system and asking a still underexplored question How are ontological structures reflected in intra and cross linguistic regularities This question defines the research program of ontology based linguistics or ontolinguistics Recent advances in the theory of language have been characterized by an emphasis on external explanatory adequacy and thus on relating language to other phenomena The research program introduced in this volume adds a decisively distinct and fresh aspect to this emerging new contextualization of the field by bringing together insights from different areas mainly linguistics but also neuroscience philosophy and artificial intelligence In providing these disciplines with a new common task the exploration of the impact of ontological structures on linguistic regularities the ontolinguistic approach promises to develop into a vital branch of cognitive science Documenting the beginnings the book aims to instigate future interdisciplinary research in this area It will be of interest to researchers in linguistics artificial intelligence philosophy and cognitive science in general

Linguistic Diversity and Language Theories Zygmunt Frajzyngier,Adam Hodges,David S. Rood,2005-01-01 From the refinement of general methodology to new insights of synchronic and diachronic universals to studies of specific phenomena this collection demonstrates the crucial role that language data play in the evolution of useful accurate linguistic theories Issues addressed include the determination of meaning in typological studies a refined understanding of diachronic processes by including intentional social statistical and level determined phenomena the reconsideration of categories such as sentence evidential or adposition and structures such as compounds or polysynthesis the tension between formal simplicity and functional clarity the inclusion of unusual systems in theoretical debates and fresh approaches to Chinese classifiers possession in Oceanic languages and English aspect This is a careful selection of papers presented at the International Symposium on Linguistic Diversity and Language Theories in Boulder Colorado The purpose of the Symposium was to confront fundamental issues in language structure and change with the rich variation of forms and functions observed across languages

A Grammar of Kunbarlang Ivan Kapitonov,2021-07-05 This is a comprehensive linguistic description of Kunbarlang Gunbalang a highly endangered polysynthetic language of northern Australia Kunbarlang belongs to the non Pama Nyungan Gunwinyguan language family and is currently spoken by nearly 40 people This work draws on elicitations and analysis of narratives from the author s original field work 2015 2018 as well as those from previous recordings The main areas covered are the sound system morphology syntax and aspects of lexical and constructional semantics Dictated by the polysynthetic structure of the language and the patterns of its use the principal focus of the work is the analysis of the verbal complex and the interaction between the verb and other constituents of the clause The analysis strike a balance between taking into consideration the areal and genetic context being informed by linguistic typology and theory yet at the same time remaining data driven and theory neutral in the way generalisations are stated Against the Australian and a broader cross linguistic background Kunbarlang possesses remarkable features at all levels of its organisation

Aspect in Mandarin Chinese Richard Xiao,Tony McEnery,2004-01-01 Chinese as an aspect language has played an important role in the development of aspect theory This book is a systematic and structured exploration of the linguistic devices that Mandarin Chinese employs to express aspectual meanings The work presented here is the first corpus based account of aspect in Chinese encompassing both situation aspect and viewpoint aspect In using corpus data the book seeks to achieve a marriage between theory driven and corpus based approaches to linguistics The corpus based model presented explores aspect at both the semantic and grammatical levels At the semantic level a two level model of situation aspect is proposed which covers

both the lexical and sentential levels thus giving a better account of the compositional nature of situation aspect At the grammatical level four perfective and four imperfective aspects in Chinese are explored in detail This exploration corrects many intuition based misconceptions and associated misleading conclusions about aspect in Chinese common in the literature

Catching Language Felix K. Ameka, Alan Dench, Nicholas Evans, 2008-08-22 Descriptive grammars are our main vehicle for documenting and analysing the linguistic structure of the world's 6 000 languages They bring together in one place a coherent treatment of how the whole language works and therefore form the primary source of information on a given language consulted by a wide range of users areal specialists typologists theoreticians of any part of language syntax morphology phonology historical linguistics etc and members of the speech communities concerned The writing of a descriptive grammar is a major intellectual challenge that calls on the grammarian to balance a respect for the language's distinctive genius with an awareness of how other languages work to combine rigour with readability to depict structural regularities while respecting a corpus of real material and to represent something of the native speaker's competence while recognising the variation inherent in any speech community Despite a recent surge of awareness of the need to document little known languages there is no book that focusses on the manifold issues that face the author of a descriptive grammar This volume brings together contributors who approach the problem from a range of angles Most have written descriptive grammars themselves but others represent different types of reader Among the topics they address are overall issues of grammar design the complementary roles of outsider and native speaker grammarians the balance between grammar and lexicon cross linguistic comparability the role of explanation in grammatical description the interplay of theory and a range of fieldwork methods in language description the challenges of describing languages in their cultural and historical context and the tensions between linguistic particularity established practice of particular schools of linguistic description and the need for a universally commensurable analytic framework This book will renew the field of grammaticography addressing a multiple readership of descriptive linguists typologists and formal linguists by bringing together a range of distinguished practitioners from around the world to address these questions

Proto-Australian Mark Harvey, Robert Mailhammer, 2024-08-19 This book is the first full evaluation of the Proto Australian hypothesis which proposes that most Australian languages have a common ancestor Proto Australian PA Using the standard methodologies of historical linguistics the authors show that nearly all Australian languages descend from PA Given that PA was a single language it was spoken only in a small area of Australia Its descendants have spread across the continent Current theories of language spread do not offer clear motivations for large scale spread in hunter gatherer economies This raises significant questions for analyses of Australian prehistory and archaeology specifically and more widely for general theories of hunter gatherer prehistory and language spread

Word, 2005 Problems of Polysynthesis Nicholas Evans, Hans-Jürgen Sasse, 2014-09-05 The papers deal with a range of questions raised for linguistic theory and description by polysynthetic languages Prototypical

polysynthetic languages found among unrelated language families in such varied parts of the world as North America Meso America Siberia northern Australia and Papua New Guinea display remarkably similar suites of grammatical characteristics But nearly two centuries after Humboldt and Kleinschmidt began to make the existence and interest of polysynthetic languages widely known among linguistics languages of this type continue to pose a challenge to every major linguistic theory

Features Greville G. Corbett, 2012-10-11 A unique examination of the features of language how features vary between languages and also how they work

The Linguistics of Sitting, Standing and Lying John Newman, 2002-01-01 This volume explores properties of sit stand and lie verbs reflecting three of the most salient postures associated with humans An introductory chapter by the Editor provides an overview of directions for research into posture verbs These directions are then explored in detail in a number of languages Dutch Korean Japanese Lao Chantyal Magar Tibeto Burman Chipewyan Athapaskan Trumai spoken in Brazil Kxoe Khoisan Mbay Nilo Saharan Oceanic Enga Ku Waru Papuan Arrernte Pitjantjatjara Ngan gityemerri Australian The contributors discuss data relevant to many fields of linguistic inquiry including patterns of lexicalization e g simplex or complex verb forms morphology e g state vs action formations grammaticalization e g extension to locational predicates aspect markers auxiliaries copulas classifiers and figurative extension A final chapter reports on an experimental methodology designed to establish the relevant cognitive parameters underlying speakers judgements on the polysemy of English stand Taken together the chapters provide a wealth of cross linguistic data on posture verbs

The Expression of Gender Greville G. Corbett, 2013-12-12 Gender is a fascinating category which has grown steadily in importance across the humanities and social sciences The book centres on the core of the category within language Each of the seven contributions provides an independent account of a key part of the topic ranging from gender and sex gender and culture to typology dialect variation and psycholinguistics The authors pay attention to a broad range of languages including English Chukchi Konso and Mohawk

A Grammar of Coastal Marind Bruno Olsson, 2021-06-08 This grammar provides the first modern comprehensive description of Coastal Marind It is a Papuan language spoken by the coastal dwelling Marind Anim formerly expansionistic head hunters of the Southern New Guinea lowlands Like the other languages of the poorly known Anim family Coastal Marind features astonishingly complex verb morphology and a range of unusual phenomena including indexing of up to four arguments on the verb verbal marking of focus the Orientation system engagement prefixes tracking the attention of the addressee and a system of four genders realised by intricate agreement patterns The structure of the language is examined in a detailed but accessible way and its many complexities are brought to life by contextualised spontaneous data drawn from a rich audio visual corpus
