Nonlinear Deformation Waves U. Nigul, J. Engelbrecht, 1983-05 Recent progress in the study of nonlinear wave propagation has been influenced by developments in mechanics acoustics hydro dynamics plasma physics and many other fields of physics This vast field of research has also given rise to fascinating mathematical ideas the inverse scattering method and the technique of exterior differential forms being just some to be mentioned Obviously the theory of nonlinear waves may be interpreted as an interdisciplinary study with the mechanics of continuous media as a theoretical basis This was the starting point of the proposal to the General Assembly of the IUTAM to hold an IUTAM Symposium on this topic made by the USSR National Committee of Theoretical and Applied Mechanics and the Academy of Sciences of the Estonian SSR Actually the IUTAM Symposium on Nonlinear Deformation Waves was the third meeting of such kind to be held in Tallinn In 1973 the Academy of Sciences of the Estonian SSR and Gorky State University organized a national Symposium on Nonlinear and Thermal Effects in Transient Wave Propagation In 1978 the Academy of Sciences of the Estonian SSR organized another national Symposium on Nonlinear Deformation Waves with participants from several other countries The participants of this Symposium in their final resolution expressed a wish that a similar meeting of definitely international type should take place again in Tallinn in 1982
