The Lost Towns of the Quabbin Valley Elizabeth Peirce, 2003-07 The Quabbin Reservoir in central Massachusetts was created in 1938 to supply the state's growing population with a source of drinking water. More than two thousand people were displaced when the Quabbin Valley was flooded. Three branches of the Swift River were dammed and five towns—Dana, Enfield, Greenwich, Prescott, and parts of New Salem—were covered with water. The Lost Towns of the Quabbin Valley highlights the life and times of these towns from 1754 to 1938 when the inhabitants were told "All Must Leave." The architectural landscape of the Quabbin Valley at one time included the churches, cemeteries, schoolhouses, post offices, homes, and businesses that made the thriving communities. The Lost Towns of the Quabbin Valley presents rare photographs of town life, including images of students at the first Hillside School and Dr. Mary Walker, a Congressional Medal of Honor recipient and Greenwich summer resident. The images are drawn from the archives of the Swift River Valley Historical Society. Although the towns are gone, their stories are alive and well.

Quabbin Valley: Life As It Was Elizabeth Peirce, 2015-01-19 Quabbin, the Nipmuc Indian word for many waters, was the name originally given to the area of central Massachusetts that is now known as the Quabbin Valley. The abundance of ponds, lakes, and streams in the region made it an obvious target for those seeking new water sources to supply the escalating population of Boston in the late 19th century. However, the little towns of Dana, Enfield, Greenwich, and Prescott that were established in the area stood in the way. Following an act of the legislature in 1926, these towns were disincorporated and the 2,500 inhabitants were given modest compensation and ordered to leave. By 1938, the former towns were flooded and stood at the floor of the reservoir, which held the potential of 420 billion gallons of water to be outsourced eastward. Never to be forgotten, the story of the lost towns and their former residents is displayed through artifacts housed at the Swift River Valley Historical Society in North New Salem.

Lost Towns of the Swift River Valley: Drowned by the Quabbin Elena Palladino, 2022-10 In April 1938, Swift River Valley residents held a farewell ball to mark the demise of the quintessential New England town of Enfield and its three smaller neighbors Greenwich Dana and Prescott The Commonwealth of Massachusetts sacrificed these three towns to build the Quabbin a massive reservoir of drinking water for residents of Boston Three prominent residents attended the somber occasion Marion Andrews Smith was the last surviving member of an important manufacturing family Willard Doc Segur was the valley's beloved country doctor and town leader And Edwin Henry Howe was Enfield's postmaster and general store proprietor They helped build their beloved community for decades only to watch grief stricken as it was destroyed by 400 billion gallons of water Author and historian Elena Palladino recounts the story of these communities as seen through eyes of those who lived there until the end

Quabbin Valley: People and Places Elizabeth Peirce, 2006 A collection of vintage photographs and an informative text provide a nostalgic look at the Quabbin Valley from 1750 to 1938 documenting the everyday lives of the inhabitants of Dana Enfield Prescott Greenwich and their environs until they were displaced when the region was flooded to create the Quabbin Reservoir Original

The Girls and Boys of Belchertown Robert N. Hornick, 2012 During much of the twentieth century people labeled feeble minded mentally deficient and mentally retarded were often confined in large publicly funded residential institutions located on the edges of small towns and villages some distance from major population centers At the peak of their development in the late 1960s these institutions frequently called schools or homes housed 190 000 men women and children in the United States The Girls and Boys of Belchertown offers the first detailed history of an American public institution for intellectually disabled persons Robert Hornick recounts the story of the Belchertown State School in Belchertown Massachusetts from its beginnings in the 1920s to its closure in the 1990s following a scandalous exposé and unprecedented court case that put the institution under direct supervision of a federal judge He draws on personal interviews private letters and other unpublished sources as well as local newspapers long out of print materials and government reports to re create what it was like to live and work at the school More broadly he gauges the impact of changing social attitudes toward intellectual disability and examines the relationship that developed over time between the school and the town where it was located What emerges is a candid and complex portrait of the Belchertown State School that neither vilifies those in charge nor excuses the injustices perpetrated on its residents but makes clear that despite the court ordered reforms of its final decades the institution needed to be closed
