

Public Housing With only 100 Jewish families in Tel Aviv in 1920, the city's population was 10,000. The Tel Aviv Municipality, established in 1921, was the first to plan for the future. It built the first public housing project in 1925, the Tel Aviv Municipality Housing Project. The project was a series of small, one-story houses, each with a private garden. The houses were built on a hillside, and the project was a success. It was the first time that a city had planned for its future. The project was a success because it was the first time that a city had planned for its future. The project was a success because it was the first time that a city had planned for its future.
