Rocky Mountain Rendezvous Charles Lewis Camp, South Pass Will Bagley,2014-05-01 Wallace Stegner called South Pass one of the most deceptive and impressive places in the West Nowhere can travelers cross the Rockies so easily as through this high treeless valley in Wyoming immediately south of the Wind River Mountains South Pass has received much attention in lore and memory but attracted no serious book length study until now In this narrative award winning author Will Bagley explains the significance of South Pass to the nation s history and to the development of the American West Fur traders first saw South Pass in 1812 From the early 1840s until the completion of the Union Pacific and Central Pacific Railroads almost forty years later emigrants on the Oregon California and Mormon Trails used South Pass in transforming the American West in a single generation Bagley traces the peopling of the region by the earliest inhabitants and adventurers including Indian peoples trappers and fur traders missionaries and government commissioned explorers Later California gold rushers Latter day Saints and families seeking new lives went through this singular gap in the Rockies Without South Pass overland wagons beginning their journey far to the east along the Missouri River could not have reached their destinations in a single season and western settlement might have been delayed for decades The story of South Pass offers a rich history The Overland Stage Pony Express and first transcontinental telegraph all came through the region Nearly a century later President Dwight D Eisenhower designated South Pass as one of America s first National Historic Landmarks An American place so rich in historical significance Bagley argues deserves the best of historical preservation efforts Finding Rendezvous Rory J. Becker,2010 The general locations of the Rocky Mountain Rendezvous have been known to historians through documentary evidence since the mid to late 1800s While the approximate locations of the rendezvous sites provided through historic documents have sufficed for the placement of signs and markers commemorating these annual events archaeologists seeking to learn more about the yearly gathering of mountain men and native peoples through excavations need a more precise area to begin their search on the landscape The exact locations of the Rocky Mountain Rendezvous are yet unknown in the sense of an archaeologist visiting a rendezvous site trowel in hand and hoping to unearth a small portion of fur trade history In this study I present a method for moving from the approximate locations for the Rocky Mountain Rendezvous sites provided by historic documents to identifying specific rendezvous archaeological sites through use of historic documents geophysical survey and GIS modeling The first paper in this dissertation examines the demographics of the rendezvous By use of historic documents I present a method for estimating the number of people who may have been present at the rendezvous and winter camps from 1825 through 1829 By using this method for estimating people at the rendezvous it becomes clear more native people were in attendance at the rendezvous and winter camps than trappers and traders of European descent Once armed with the knowledge a rendezvous site should more closely resemble the archaeological signature of a Protohistoric native camp than a historic Euroamerican archaeological site the search for a

Protohistoric native camp to be mapped with geophysical survey instruments can begin During this study such a search resulted in the successful mapping of a portion of the camp surrounding a fur trading post on the banks of Powder River in east central Wyoming The final section in the dissertation will address the issue of where and how to focus a geophysical survey in hopes of finding the Protohistoric camp signature within the potential rendezvous locations identified in the historic documents The study focuses on identifying potential survey areas along the Green River in western Wyoming considered highly probable to contain intact buried archaeological deposits dating to at least the early 1800s A systematic survey is proposed focusing on areas not only identified through historic documentary research as being locations for the rendezvous but also containing sediments holding intact deposits dating to the time of the fur trade Wyeth's Oregon...and Townsend's narrative of a journey across the Rocky Mountains...v.22-25, Travels in the interior of North America; by Maximilian, prince of Wied...v.26, Flagg's The far West...pt.1 Reuben Gold Thwaites,1905 The Oxford Handbook of Community Singing Esther M.
