Scarce Water And Institutional Change:

Scarce Water and Institutional Change Kenneth D. Frederick, 2013-10-18 The authors assess alternative approaches to meeting long term water needs and resolving conflicts among competing water users in five areas the Columbia River Basin Kern County California south California Virginia Beach Virginia and northeastern Colorado This book argues that America's water supply problems are caused largely by bad habits and poor policies especially policies that price water far under its true value Originally published in 1986 Selected Water Resources Abstracts, 1987

Institutional Response to a Changing Water Policy Environment, 1991 Selected Water Resources Abstracts, 1987 Water Resource

Economics and Policy W. D. Shaw, 2021-02-26 This second edition includes updated information and an exploration of water issues outside the United States as well as a new application of behavioral and experimental economics to the topic A concise introduction to issues of water quality and quantity in both urban and agricultural settings Water Resource Economics and Policy will be a valuable resource or text for students and researchers in the fields of agricultural economics geography law and hydrology Those involved in water resource agencies and private utilities will also find the book a useful reference

Evaluating Water Institutions and Water Sector Performance R. Maria Saleth, 1999-01-01 Physical limits to fresh water expansion an emerging reality in many parts of the world make absolute water scarcity inevitable The inability of the already developed water supply to meet an ever growing demand for fresh water also makes the emergence of relative water scarcity unavoidable Water scarcity both in its absolute and relative forms gets accentuated further by an increasing premium attached to water quality and ecological sustainability The water sector has undergone remarkable changes in recent years While past achievements were associated mainly with investment in new physical structures recent developments in the water sector are associated to a greater extent with improved management and institutional changes Although both the nature and direction of these institutional changes vary by country specific economic political cultural and resource realities there are clearly identifiable trends and patterns This report suggests a new methodology to shed light on the process of institution performance interaction It demonstrates the use of the methodology by applying it to an extensive cross country data set and by deriving policy guidance based on the results The authors aim to stimulate thought and debate about methodologies and strategies to be used in order to evaluate institutional change and institution performance interactions in the water sector

Water Trading and Global Water Scarcity Josefina Maestu, 2013 Water scarcity is an increasing problem in many parts of the world yet conventional supply side economics and management are insufficient to deal with it In this book the role of water trading as an instrument of integrated water resources management is explored in depth It is also shown to be an instrument for conflict resolution where it may be necessary to reallocate water in the context of increasing scarcity Recent experiences of implementation in different river basins have shown their potential as instruments for improving allocation These experiences however also show that there are implementation challenges and some limitations to trading that need to be considered This book explores the various types of water trading formulas through the experience of using them in different parts of the world The final result is varied because in most cases trading is conditioned by the legal and institutional framework in which the transactions are carried out The role of government and the definition of water rights and licenses are critical for the success of water trading The book studies the institutional framework and how transactions have been undertaken drawing some lessons on how trading can improve It also analyses whether trading has really been a positive instrument to manage scarcity and improve water ecosystems and pollution emission problems in those parts of the world which are most affected The book concludes by making policy proposals to improve the implementation of water trading

The Politics of Water Institutional Reform in Neo-Patrimonial States

Jenniver Sehring, 2009-01-30 There is more than enough water in the world for domestic purposes for agriculture and for industry In short scarcity is manufactured through political processes and institutions United Nations Human Development Report 2006 3 Water scarcity water crisis water wars since the beginning of the 1990s these terms have appeared again and again in scientific debates political strategies and media reports Water is perceived as a scarce resource that needs efficient management in order to satisfy all needs and to prevent violent conflicts over its distribution Considerable research has been devoted to this topic In this research water is commonly referred to as a common pool resource a non excludable public good with rivalry in terms of consumption Hence research has long focused on collective action problems in managing this common pool resource e g Ostrom 1990 1992 In recent years anthropological and sociological scholars in particular have criticized that in these studies the complexity of water its embeddedness in a wider cultural and social context and the role of power have been neglected Water is different from other natural resources in some important aspects its mobility its variability and its multiplicity Mehta 2006 2f Linton 2006 10 Mobility makes ownership claims difficult Water moves transcending state borders not fixed like other resources Variability refers to the fact that its availability varies temporarily depending on weather conditions

Climate Change 2001: Impacts, Adaptation, and Vulnerability

Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change. Working Group II, 2001-07-02 Some issues addressed in this Working Group III volume are mitigation of greenhouse gas emissions managing biological carbon reservoirs geo engineering costing methods and decision making frameworks

Climate Change 2001: The Scientific Basis J. T. Houghton, Y. Ding, D. J. Griggs, M. Noguer, P. J. van der

Linden, X. Dai, K. Maskell, C. A. Johnson, 2001-07-12 Climate Change 2001 The Scientific Basis is the most comprehensive and up to date scientific assessment of past present and future climate change The report Analyses an enormous body of observations of all parts of the climate system Catalogues increasing concentrations of atmospheric greenhouse gases Assesses our understanding of the processes and feedbacks which govern the climate system Projects scenarios of future climate change using a wide range of models of future emissions of greenhouse gases and aerosols Makes a detailed study of whether a human influence on climate can be identified Suggests gaps in information and understanding that remain in our knowledge of climate change and how these might be addressed This latest IPCC assessment will again form the standard scientific reference for all concerned with climate change and its consequences including students and researchers in all aspects of environmental and atmospheric science and policymakers in governments and industry worldwide
