Keller,2014-07-11 Brief narratives or medieval precursors to the modern short story are compositions couched in the form of a tale of reasonable short length They began with writings in Latin and eventually made their way into the vernacular languages of Europe They include the fable the apologue the exemplum the saint s life the miracle the biography the adventure tale the romance the jest and the anecdote among others In Spain the oldest extant brief narratives in written form are in verse and date from the late twelfth and early thirteenth centuries The earliest examples include La vida de Santa Maria Egipcíaca and El libre dels tres reys d Orient Both are concise enough to be read in one sitting and were probably read before or after meals as entertainment In Pious Brief Narrative in Medieval Castilian and Galician Verse John E Keller studies the structure of the pious brief narrative including such works as the Cantigas de Santa

Maria of Alfonso X and Gonzalo de Berceo's Milagros de Nuestra Señora among others. He examines which narrative techniques were employed by their authors including versification, music, and the pictorial arts as aids to narration. Using nine basic elements: plot, setting, conflict, characterization, theme, style, effect, point of view, and mood or tone, Keller shows how writers in medieval Spain employed more sophisticated uses of these techniques than has previously been recognized.
