The Many Faces of Imitation in Language Learning Gisela E. Speidel, Keith E. Nelson, 2012-12-06 In this book we take a fresh look at imitation With the knowledge of some 20 years of research after Chomsky's initial critique of the behavioristic approach to language learning it is time to explore imitation once again How imitation is viewed in this book has changed greatly since the 1950s and can only be understood by reading the various contributions This reading reveals many faces many forms many causes and many functions of imitation cognitive social information processing learning and biological Some views are far removed from the notion that an imitation must occur immediately or that it must be a perfect copy of an adult sentence But the essence of the concept of imitation is retained Some of the child's language behavior originates as an imitation of a prior model The range of phenomena covered is broad and stimulating Imitation's role is discussed from infancy on through all stages of language learning Individual differences among children are examined in how much they use imitation and in what forms and to what purposes they use it The forms and functions of parent imitation of their child are considered Second language learning is studied alongside first language learning The juxtaposition of so many views and facets of imitation in this book will help us to study the commonalities as well as differences of various forms and functions of imitative language and will help us to discern the further dimensions along which we must begin to differentiate imitation

Newton to Aristotle Casti,Karlqvist,2012-12-06 Beginning in 1983 the Swedish Council for Planning and Coordination of Research has organized an annual workshop devoted to some aspect of the behavior and modeling of complex systems These workshops have been held at the Abisko Research Station of the Swedish Academy of Sciences a remote location far above the Arctic Circle in northern Sweden During the period of the midnight sun from May 4 8 1987 this exotic venue served as the gathering place for a small group of scientists scholars and other connoisseurs of the unknown to ponder the problem of how to model living systems a term singling out those systems whose principal components are living agents The 1987 Abisko Workshop focused primarily upon the general system theoretic concepts of process function and form In particular a main theme of the Workshop was to examine how these concepts are actually realized in biological economic and linguistic situations As the Workshop unfolded it became increasingly evident that the central concern of the participants was directed to the matter of how those quintessential aspects of living systems metabolism self repair and replication might be brought into contact with the long established modeling paradigms employed in physics chemistry and engineering
