The Dreaming Treasure Dave McFather,2013-06-13 A young couple travels by car around a lake in Marshland within the Portobello coast The tour they perform brings them several memoirs about an ancient treasure supposedly brought there by the Normans when founding a colony in Murtoylana a small town on the edge of lake Avia The treasure hunt begins guided by some old maps the protagonists carry with them Although will they ever reach such a treasure During my life as a student I lived in a shared house a cottage with doors and windows all the time very well maintained and painted in a street by the High School The Landlady outstanding for her waxed floor and alas if her guests or even her children put at shoe or a toe out of carpets inside ways To reach our rooms we had to endeavour through a narrow corridor with access to a staircase covered by a red plastic carpet Our rooms were a sort of tiny little closets which walls leaned to some divans tables and chairs At the top of the stairs in between rooms the common wardrobe By noon we stood at the school s gate shaking our heads nodding looking at the sad marks obtained in the tests assessed and delivered by our teachers or cogitating about having been invited during lesson to approach the blackboard Beautiful object was no doubt that black heavy slate attached to the wall looking moreover like a sad night rather than an object made of stone It was a sort of consolation prize after the small framed slate that we carried along with manuals in Primary School instead of transporting it we were thereby it carried on during lessons After school by noon I went home for lunch where I could immediately feel the habitual chickpea soup ill fated smell Sitting at the table eating the bloody chickpea soup and listening to the news as Radio Renaissance was all the time tuned up throughout the building Portobello's news service was usually concerned about events that just happened to occur abroad This was followed by a comedy of the preference of our hostess a woman of dried breasts and feelings who boasted her guests to be anaphylaxis well treated very clean and tidy We were a sort of pets entrusted by our stupid mums to others of the same resemblance who in turn entrusted us to our teachers Our readings and hobbies contained affinities to some techniques used in treasure discovery and excavations so as to operate on firm land and underwater such as the use of diving technique using bottled oxygen and mask In my Grammar School year 8 by remarkable coincidence the nine subjects that comprised the curriculum for that year were ministered by nine different young female teachers In the awakening of sexuality spending the whole day listening to beautiful well dressed masters chattering about numeracy and literacy was indeed very exciting Staring all day turning our eyes to the knees of some less prudish young governesses or to be lucky enough to glimpse The Great
