Nutrition, Aging, and the Elderly D.E. Danford, H.N. Munro, 2013-11-11 The proportion of the population over 65 years of age is increasing steadily in most industrialized countries In the United States the proportion of elderly people has risen from four percent in 1900 to 11 % in 1978 and is projected to be 14% by the year 2000 The occurrence of debilitating chronic diseases in the elderly increases with each additional year These diseases along with the natural loss of tissue function that occurs throughout adult life impose a heavy burden on the health care system Nutrition plays an important etiologic role in many of these degenerative changes Consequently the aging segment of the population presents a challenge to the nutrition scientist who should be able to recommend optimal intakes of nutrients to minimize the functional losses associated with aging and to optimize the health of those already elderly This sixth volume in the series Human Nutrition A Comprehensive Treatise provides a conspectus of the various interactions of nutrition with the aging process and a comprehensive survey of current knowledge of the amounts of individual nutrients needed by the elderly The volume begins with a general survey of the multifaceted relationship of nutrition to aging followed by four chapters on how nutrition can affect age related changes in selected body functions The next six chapters cover the available evidence regarding the needs of the elderly for dietary energy protein calcium trace elements vitamins and fiber Nutrition and Healthy Aging in the Community Institute of Medicine, Food and Nutrition Board, 2012-05-15

The U S population of older adults is predicted to grow rapidly as baby boomers those born between 1946 and 1964 begin to reach 65 years of age Simultaneously advancements in medical care and improved awareness of healthy lifestyles have led to longer life expectancies The Census Bureau projects that the population of Americans 65 years of age and older will rise from approximately 40 million in 2010 to 55 million in 2020 a 36 percent increase Furthermore older adults are choosing to live independently in the community setting rather than residing in an institutional environment Furthermore the types of services needed by this population are shifting due to changes in their health issues Older adults have historically been viewed as underweight and frail however over the past decade there has been an increase in the number of obese older persons Obesity in older adults is not only associated with medical comorbidities such as diabetes it is also a major risk factor for functional decline and homebound status The baby boomers have a greater prevalence of obesity than any of their historic counterparts and projections forecast an aging population with even greater chronic disease burden and disability In light of the increasing numbers of older adults choosing to live independently rather than in nursing homes and the important role nutrition can play in healthy aging the Institute of Medicine IOM convened a public workshop to illuminate issues related to community based delivery of nutrition services for older adults and to identify nutrition interventions and model programs Nutrition and Healthy Aging in the Community summarizes the presentations and discussions prepared from the workshop transcript and slides This report examines nutrition related issues of concern experienced by older adults in the community including nutrition screening food insecurity sarcopenic obesity dietary patterns for older adults and economic issues This report explores transitional care as individuals move from acute subacute or chronic care settings to the community and provides models of transitional care in the community This report also provides examples of successful intervention models in the community setting and covers the discussion of research gaps in knowledge about nutrition interventions and services for older adults in the community

Nutrition and Functional Foods for Healthy Aging Ronald Ross Watson, 2017-02-01 Nutrition and Functional Foods for Healthy Aging aims to equip anyone studying geriatric nutrition or working with aging adults with the latest scientific reviews of critical topics The major objective of this book is to review in detail the health problems of the aged and how normal food lifestyle or nutritional and dietary supplements can help treat them Nutrient requirements for optimum health and function of aging physiological systems are often quite distinct from those required for young people The special nutrition problems of the aged are intensively researched and tested especially as the elderly become a larger percentage of the population Many chronic diseases and cancers are found with higher frequency in the aged and it is also widely known that many elderly people use foods and nutrients well above the recommended daily allowance which can be detrimental to optimal health Explains the evidence supporting nutritional interventions relevant to age related diseases Reviews the macro and micro nutrient requirements of aging adults and their variables Describes how alcohol drugs and caffeine can impact deficiencies also exploring functional food and dietary supplements that can be used for prevention and treatment

Nutrition Across the Lifespan for Healthy Aging National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Health and Medicine Division, Food and Nutrition Board, Food Forum, 2017-05-11 In September 2016 the National Academies of Sciences Engineering and Medicine convened a workshop to examine trends and patterns in aging and factors related to healthy aging in the United States with a focus on nutrition and how nutrition can sustain and promote healthy aging not just in late adulthood but beginning in pregnancy and early childhood and extending throughout the lifespan Participants
