

standard practice here is to rely upon racial and religious differences to unify supporters and stigmatize critics: You're either with us or against us, a loyal subject or a "terrorist." These tactics remain effective, especially during "wartime," but they are also newly vulnerable to internal divisions. The diasporic world, the many millions of post-colonial immigrants now in the Northern countries, and the legacy of anti-racist and civil rights movements, all potentially undermine such authoritarian appeals. The dimension of religious pluralism is especially important now. Why? Because racial and religious profiling are converging. Because Islamophobia is threatening to polarize the globe once again, this time in a nuclear age. And because religious fundamentalism — North and South, East and West — is itself a direct threat to democracy.

The Body is the Person: The body was a key topic at Durban, because racial identity is always about the body. At Durban, there was discussion about enslavement (ownership of one's body by another) past and present, about trafficking in women's and children's (particularly girls') bodies, AIDS and other diseases as racial phenomena, and about the multiform linkages between sex/gender and race. It is not news that racism derives much of its energy from sexism, from the efforts of men to possess and control women's bodies. Nor is it surprising that authoritarian and anti-democratic rule takes

Through the aggregation and synthesis of many efforts to make sense of the current crisis, we will advance toward a new politics.

women as its first hostages. Whether traditional or modern, whether religious or corporate, whether opposing the barqua, demanding the right to abortion, or resisting the maquilas and sweatshops that dot the globe, a central thread of democratic movements — anti-racist, anti-globalization and anti-authoritarian — is the liberation of women. The right of all human beings to control over their own bodies is a fundamental democratic demand.

In Lieu of a Conclusion: These are only tentative thoughts on the enormous challenge we — our movement, our radical democratic commitments — face in the post-Durban, and especially post-9/11, era. But this work will continue: it is part of a larger project. Numerous activists and writers are struggling with these issues. Not through any one set of ideas, but through the aggregation and synthesis of many efforts to make sense of the current crisis, will we advance toward a new politics. Ultimately, while ideas may be important, what we all rely upon most is the great unfulfilled desire for freedom that exists in human beings. Our task as a movement is to interpret and help organize that desire.

Reflections in a Jaundiced Eye: Durban and Beyond

by Wade Henderson

It's been only a few months since the tragedy of September 11, but it's already cliché to suggest to those of us who live in this country how deeply the events of that day have affected our lives and seared our psyches. We know firsthand that the magnitude of loss is a grievous blow, both in lost lives and lost political innocence. And as if that weren't disconcerting enough, we now find ourselves thrust into the global "war against terrorism," a new kind of conflict with uncertain targets and even more uncertain consequences beyond the borders of Afghanistan. Did I forget to mention that we're simultaneously fighting a bio-terrorist attack of anthrax, which may be related to these events or may be from a domestic source?

America is at war; and Americans are on edge! Not surprisingly, public attention is turned to the economic recession and important questions of national security and the newly designated homeland defense. Unfortunately, questions regarding civil liberties, human rights and policies affecting the broader domestic agenda are being forced into the back of the bus at their time of greatest need.

One of the most frequently asked questions in the immediate aftermath of the September 11 attack was, "Why do the terrorists hate us?" And not unexpectedly, the immediate reaction of many Americans seemed based on anger and patriotic pride, not analysis: "There can be no adequate explanation for such a heinous act!" "We stand for freedom, and they resent it." There is truth in these statements, but being right is not always enough. If our nation is to overcome the challenges of the moment and move to a long-term solution to the problem of global terrorism, we will need a deeper, more perceptive analysis to
