Reflection on the Death of a Porcupine D. H. Lawrence, 2019-02-20 This collection of essays by the author of Lady Chatterley's Lover presents his musings on literature, politics and philosophy in a newly restored text. Though D. H. Lawrence was one of the great writers of the twentieth century, his works were severely corrupted by the stringent house styling of printers and the intrusive editing of timid publishers. A team of scholars at Cambridge University Press has worked for more than thirty years to restore the definitive texts of D. H. Lawrence in The Cambridge Editions. Between 1915 and 1925 D. H. Lawrence wrote a series of philosophical essays covering topics ranging from politics to nature and from religion to education. Varying in tone from lighthearted humor to spiritual meditation, they all share the underlying themes of Lawrence's mature work. As far as possible, the editors of the Cambridge Editions series have restored these essays to their original form as Lawrence wrote them. A discussion of the history of each essay is provided, and several incomplete and unpublished essays are reproduced in an appendix.

Gethsemane Hall David Annandale, 2012-08-11 Sometimes the truth will make you bleed. The skeptics think they know what's going on at Gethsemane Hall. So do the religious. So do the spiritualists. They're all wrong. Richard Gray, grieving over the loss of his wife and daughter, learns that his ancestral home holds the secret of what lies beyond the grave. And all of a sudden, everybody wants a piece of Gethsemane Hall. Louise Meacham wants in because a fellow CIA agent committed suicide there and she has to put the ghost rumours to rest to get her career back. Anna Pertwee wants in because she's determined to save the ghosts from the unbelievers and the debunkers. Patrick Hudson wants in because he has to save Gray's soul. So Gray will let them all in. These people who think they're coming for the truth. What they don't know is that the truth is coming for them.

This new fourth edition includes new information on integrated design strategies and designing for the Tropics. Resources include helpful case studies, checklists, diagrams and a companion website featuring additional cases, an image bank and instructor materials. Designing buildings that require less energy to heat, cool and light means allowing the natural energy of the sun and wind to reduce the
