Coles,2005 This book is the outcome of a prolonged period of discovery and research into the Bronze Age rock carvings of Bohusl n Sweden and Ostfold Norway Over 100 of the most complex and varied sites containing many thousands of images are presented in new plans and photographs The variety and precision of the methods of recording have revealed hitherto unknown carvings and new details on many of the sites including some of the best known sites in all of Sweden and Norway The images of boats humans wheeled vehicles wild and domesticated animals ards weapons and other symbols demonstrate great variability A structural analysis permits some identification of particular artists whilst the identification of dated styles of boat images allows some element of specific chronology to be presented Over 800 rock carving sites and their contemporary monuments are mapped and described in terms of the evolving landscapes of the period 1500 300 BC The current excavation programmes at the base of sites are outlined as well as the likely relationship between rock carvings and adjacent wetlands The area explored in the book includes the World Heritage region in western Sweden and the whole territory of rock carvings examined forms one of Europe s greatest prehistoric cultural treasures      The Rock Art of Norway Trond Lødøen,Gro Mandt,2010 For thousands of years people in all parts of the world have engraved images on rock panels and stones Images are found on large earth bound boulders on smaller movable stones or on rock panels in burial chambers A variety of images are conveyed including people animals objects used by humans abstract patterns and objects unrecognisable to us In Norway rock art has been found at more than 1100 sites Many motifs occur regularly across the region others are unique to certain sites The design and composition of even the most common motifs vary hugely in different parts of the country according to both the era and function of the particular site It has been a common practice to group Scandinavian rock art under two main categories the veidekunst hunter s art or the Northern Tradition associated with hunters and gatherers of the Stone Age in the period 9000 2000 B C and the jordbruksristninger agricultural petroglyphs or the Southern Tradition associated with people of the Bronze and early Iron Age from approximately 1800 B C until about 400 AD who practiced farming as a livelihood Whether the images of the hunter nomads and the farmers represent two distinct and independent traditions or whether they represent a continuous tradition encompassing changes in expression over time is still today an unresolved issue This book raises questions about the meanings that can be derived from the rock art of Norway and aims to study the images in the context of other traces found of the same society Through the sites explored and the stories told this book represents a voyage in time and space from the oldest images to the youngest from farthest north to farthest south of the country News of Norway
