immediate command for the procurement of an outfit and the beginning of August saw me again en route accompanied by two experienced mountaineers all of us mounted upon hardy mules and well provided for the journey before us The first four or five days subsequent our progress was much impeded by successive rains that rendered the road muddy and ourselves uncomfortable We were necessitated to raft the Wakarousha and the Kansas was so swollen it was forded with great difficulty the water frequently covering the backs of our animals From that onward we enjoyed pleasant weather and journeyed without further interruption nothing occurred worth note till we reached the Pawnee range near the head of Big Blue One morning while travelling along unconcernedly and at our leisure having as yet observed nothing to excite our apprehensions a Pawnee suddenly made his appearance directly in front of us Such a customer had we been aware of his proximity would have been most carefully avoided in a place so dangerous as this but as he had first discovered us it was now too late to give him the slip and we accordingly permitted his approach greeting him in a friendly manner He immediately informed us that the whole country was full of his people returning from their summer hunt and he invited us to accompany him to the village This we declined being unwilling to trust either him or his people
