Military Reform Walter Kross,2019 Military reform Walter Kross,1985 The author identifies the two sharply opposing schools of thought about how best to organize equip and train our military forces Military reformers and defense planners clash on the strategy for and the use of high technology weapons systems The author s focus on the debate over tactical air forces and missions defines and illustrates the broader more consequential issue of weapon system sophistication In concrete point counterpoint fashion he objectively lays out the successes and failures strengths and weaknesses of each side s argument Professional Journal of the United States Army ,1987 Military Review ,1987 Review of Current

Military Literature ,1987 Military Innovation in the Interwar Period Williamson R. Murray,Allan R. Millett,1998-08-13 In 1914 the armies and navies that faced each other were alike right down to the strengths of their companies and battalions and the designs of their battleships and cruisers Differences were of degree rather than essence During the interwar period however the armed forces grew increasingly asymmetrical developing different approaches to the same problems This study of major military innovations in the 1920s and 1930s explores differences in exploitation by the seven major military powers The comparative essays investigate how and why innovation occurred or did not occur and explain much of the strategic and operative performance of the Axis and Allies in World War II The essays focus on several instances of how military services developed new technology and weapons and incorporated them into their doctrine organization and styles of operations
