Military Expenditures and Economic Growth, 2001 This report presents an exploration of the historical relationship between national economic growth and military expenditures in five great power countries Germany France Russia Japan and the United States Using statistical as well as case study methodologies it examines how each country's military expenditures responded to increases in output levels and rates of growth over the period 1870 1939 and proposes plausible explanations for the relationship in each country If the historical experience holds true economic growth in some of the present day candidates for great power status will spur them to increase their rate of military expenditure growth and as a result their military capabilities As we show however each country is unique and strong economic growth by no means implies automatic expansion of military spending or capabilities In fact the historical record suggests that perceived threats from abroad may be the most significant factor contributing to increases in military expenditure in potential great powers This distinction is important because policies designed to deter foreign military expansions motivated by ambition may have perverse effects if foreign military expansions are in fact motivated by fear This report should be of particular interest to policymakers concerned about the prospect of increased military expenditures by large and rapidly growing economies The research was sponsored by the Deputy Chief of Staff for Intelligence and was conducted in RAND Arroyo Center's Strategy Doctrine and Resources Program The Arroyo Center is a federally funded research and development center sponsored by the United States Army Defense Spending And Economic Growth James E. Payne, 2019-03-13 This book examines the impact defense spending has on economic growth While defense spending was not deliberately invented as a fiscal policy instrument its importance in the composition of overall government spending and thus in determining employment is now easily recognized In light of the collapse of the Soviet Union and the consequent reduction in the threat to the security of the United States maintaining defense spending at the old level seems indefensible The media has concentrated on the so called peace dividend However as soon as the federal government is faced with defense cuts it realizes the macroeconomic ramifications of such a step Based on studies included in this volume we examine the effects of defense spending on economic growth and investigate how the changed world political climate is likely to alter the importance and pattern of defense spending both for developed and developing countries Military Expenditure and Economic Development World Bank,1992 Military Expenditure and Economic Development Banco Mundial,1992 Military expenditure and economic development : a symposium on research issues Banco Mundial,1992 Military Expenditure Mr.Daniel P. Hewitt,1991-05-01 This paper analyzes trends in world military expenditure by examining the shares of different country groups and the ratio to GDP of individual nations The coverage is military expenditures in 125 countries from 1972 to 1988 The study also compares military expenditures as a proportion of central government expenditures analyzes the budgetary trade off between military social and development expenditures and discusses the impact of military expenditures on economic development Military Expenditure and Economic Growth in the Middle East L. Wahid,2009-09-29 This book investigates the role and the impacts of armies and military regimes in the Middle East It argues that one of the main causes of the slow and stagnated economic development in the region is high military expenditure perpetuated by strong grips of armies on the politics of the region Military Expenditure, Economic Growth and Heterogeneity Paul Dunne,Nan Tian,University of Cape Town. Southern Africa Labour and Development Research Unit,2013 This paper examines examines the impact of military expenditure on economic growth on a large balanced panel using an exogenous growth model and dynamic panel data methods for 106 countries over the period 1988 2010 A major focus of the paper is to consider the possibility group heterogeneity and non linearity Having estimated the model for all of the countries in the panel and finding that military burden has a negative effect on growth in the short and long run the panel is broken down into various groupings based upon a range of potentially relevant factors and the robustness of the results is evaluated The factors considered are different levels of income conflict experience natural resources abundance openness and aid The estimates for the different groups are remarkably consistent with those for the whole panel providing strong support for the argument that military spending has adverse effects on growth There are however some intriguing results that suggest that for certain types of countries military spending has no significant effect on growth P 1 Military Expenditure in Third World Countries Saadet Deger,1986 Military Expenditure Saadet Deger,Somnath Sen,1990 The purpose of this book is to analyse world military expenditure at the end of the 1980s and to discuss its political and economic implications After a decade of unprecedented expansion of international military spending its level is falling though modestly Political developments in Europe and the success of arms control negotiations raise hopes for further reductions In addition technological and economic structural disarmament is adding to the pressure for reductions However performance has not matched up to promises and formidable obstacles to defence spending limitations still remain Military Expenditure surveys recent events and describes the process of change that characterizes international military expenditure and its determinants at this time of transformation The Economic Impact of Military Expenditures Daniel L. Landau,1993 The Peace Dividend Delano Villanueva,Mr.Malcolm D. Knight,Norman Loayza,1995-05-01 Although conventional wisdom suggests that reducing military spending may improve a country s economic growth performance empirical studies have produced ambiguous results This paper extends a standard growth model and estimates it using techniques that exploit both cross section and time series dimensions of available data to obtain consistent estimates of the growth retarding effects of military spending via its adverse impact on capital formation and resource allocation Model simulations suggest that a substantial long run Peace Dividend in the form of higher capacity output may result from i markedly lower military expenditure levels achieved in most regions during the late 1980s and ii further military spending cuts that would be possible in the future if a global peace could be secured Military Expenditures and the Level of Economic Development Hossein Askari,Michael Glover,1977 Military Expenditure and Economic Development Jean-Claude Berthélemy,Rémy Herrera,Somnath Sen,OECD Development Centre,Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development. Development Centre,1995 The Economics of Third World Military Expenditure David K. Whynes,1979-06-17 Arming the South J. Brauer,P.
