The poems examined in Part 2 explain deaths that appear to violate Milton's belief in vindicating Milton's view of death the Latin funeral elegies and On the Death of a Fair Infant Dying of a Cough form a pattern that culminates in Lycidas. Recognizing this pattern in Lycidas is indispensable to understanding the radical statement of Epitaphium Damonis, a poem that records Milton's temporary disillusionment with Christianity. In addition to new insights into the individual poems, two patterns are highlighted. In Milton's earlier poems, readers usually have seen classicism as complementing Christianity. When Milton turns to death, however, he opposes classicism to Christianity, contrasting except in the case of Epitaphium Damonis the limited pagan gods of classicism with the providence of an omnipotent God. This antagonism is reinforced by another pattern that emerges in the poems: Though all sins tend to death, some sins are more fatal than others. In much of Milton's poetry, perhaps the most consistently fatal of sins was lust, and Milton frequently represents this lust as a characteristic of classicism.

The Masculinities of John Milton Elizabeth Hodgson, 2022-09-08 The Masculinities of John Milton is the first published monograph on Milton's men. Examining how Milton's fantasies of manly authority are framed in his major works, this study exposes the gaps between Milton's pleas for liberty and his assumptions that white men like himself should rule his culture. From schoolboys teaching each other how to traffic in young women in the Ludlow Masque to his treatises on divorce that make the wife less husband, the best possible citizen, and to the later epics in which Milton wrestles with male small talk and the ladders of masculine social power, his verse and prose draw from and amplify his culture's claims about manliness in education, warfare, friendship, citizenship, and conversation. This revolutionary poet's most famous writings reveal how ambivalently manhood is constructed to serve itself in early modern England.
