Africa's economic future As the world moves away from fossil fuels in alignment with commitments under the Paris Agreement Africa's resource rich countries face new risks and opportunities Recent estimates suggest that 80 percent of the world's proven fossil fuel reserves must remain underground to meet the Paris targets and much of these stranded reserves may be in Africa This issue of stranded assets and relatedly stranded nations has major implications for the many African economies that are dependent on petroleum extraction and export On the other hand the energy transition will increase demand for raw material inputs involved in clean energy technologies The transition from fossil fuels to clean energy may create demand by 2050 for 3 billion tons of minerals and metals that are needed to deploy solar wind and geothermal energy How can African economies tap into these opportunities while managing the downside risk to their fossil fuel wealth Africa's Resource Future explores these themes and offers policy makers insights to help them navigate the coming years of uncertainty

Mining in Africa Punam Chuhan-Pole, Andrew L. Dabalen, Bryan Christopher Land, 2017-02-16 This study focuses on the local and regional impact of large scale gold mining in Africa in the context of a mineral boom in the region since 2000 It contributes to filling a gap in the literature on the welfare effects of mineral resources which until now has concentrated more on the national or macroeconomic impacts Economists have long been intrigued by the paradox that a rich endowment of natural resources may retard economic performance particularly in the case of mineral exporting developing countries Studies of this phenomenon known as the resource curse examine the economy wide consequences of mineral exports Africa's resource boom has lifted growth but has been less successful in improving people's welfare Yet much of the focus in academic and policy circles has been on appropriate management of the macro fiscal and governance risks that have historically undermined development outcomes This study focuses instead on the fortune of local communities where resources are located It aims to better inform public policy and
