The texts are accompanied by an analytic lexicon, a complete inventory of all stems and derivational bases contained in the corpus, and a detailed ethnographic glossary.      Aboriginal Society in Southern California Paul Radin, William Duncan Strong, 1929      The Languages of Native North America Marianne Mithun, 2001-06-07 This book provides an authoritative survey of the several hundred languages indigenous to North America. These languages show tremendous genetic and typological diversity and offer numerous challenges to current linguistic theory. Part I of the book provides an overview of structural features of particular interest, concentrating on those that are cross-linguistically unusual or unusually well developed. These include syllable structure, vowel and consonant harmony, tone, and sound symbolism, polysynthesis, the nature of roots and affixes, incorporation, and morpheme order. Case, grammatical distinctions of number, gender, shape, control, location, means, manner, time, empathy, and evidence, and distinctions between nouns and verbs, predicates and arguments, and simple and complex sentences, and special speech styles. Part II catalogues the languages by family, listing the location of each language, its genetic affiliation, number of speakers, major published literature, and structural highlights. Finally, there is a catalogue of languages that have evolved in contact situations.

American Indian Languages 2 Victor Golla, 2010-12-14 No detailed description available for American Indian Languages 2      The Navajo Sound System J.M. McDonough, 2003-05-31 The Navajo language is spoken by the Navajo people who live in the Navajo Nation located in Arizona and New Mexico in the southwestern United States. The Navajo language belongs to the Southern or Apachean branch of the Athabaskan language family. Athabaskan languages are closely related by their shared morphological structure; these languages have a productive and extensive inflectional morphology. The Northern Athabaskan languages are primarily spoken by people indigenous to the sub-arctic stretches of North America.

Related Apachean languages are the Athabaskan languages of the Southwest Chiricahua Jicarilla White Mountain and Mescalero Apache While many other languages like English have benefited from decades of research on their sound and speech systems instrumental analyses of indigenous languages are relatively rare There is a great deal of work to do before a chapter on the acoustics of Navajo comparable to the standard acoustic description of English can be produced The kind of detailed phonetic description required for instance to synthesize natural sounding speech or to provide a background for clinical studies in a language is well beyond the scope of a single study but it is necessary to begin this greater work with a fundamental description of the sounds and supra segmental structure of the language In keeping with this the goal of this project is to provide a baseline description of the phonetic structure of Navajo as it is spoken on the Navajo reservation today to provide a foundation for further work on the language
