Regeneration And Employment A New Agenda For Tecs Communities And Partnerships:

Regeneration and Employment John Plummer, Tricia Zipfel, 1998 Efforts to tackle the problems of urban decay and disadvantage since 1985 have underlined the complexity of regeneration For instance unless improvement strategies include an economic dimension through training job creation support for local enterprise the benefits of regeneration in poor communities will be short lived This report explores the scope for collaboration and partnership between training and Enterprise Councils TECs and other organizations involved in area regeneration including social landlords local authorities the community and the voluntary sector All those concerned with making regeneration partnerships work more effectively should find this report interesting Town and Country Planning in the UK J. Employer Involvement in Area Regeneration Alan McGregor, 1999 It is generally agreed that the single greatest area of weakness in area regeneration is in the process of economic regeneration which involves reducing unemployment and increasing the number of paid jobs It is also clear that the long term unemployed face multiple disadvantages in trying to get into the labour market This new study fills a gap in our knowledge about the effectiveness of schemes developed to date which actively involve employers in targeting the employment problems of disadvantaged areas The authors look at 12 case studies of innovative projects drawing out general patterns and concerns for good practice They provide a review of the literature to date and an indispensable directory of different approaches to involving employers Employer involvement in area regeneration is essential reading for practitioners searching for solutions to solve employment problems in disadvantaged areas for academics and students involved in developing the theory and for all those involved in economic regeneration

Environment and Planning C., 2001

The Jobs Gap in Britain's Cities Ivan Turok, Nicola Edge, 1999 This unique report examines the uneven pattern of economic and employment change across Britain in the last two decades focusing on the 20 largest cities It explores how the workforce has responded eg through outmigration outcommuting and reduced economic participation and looks at the impact on recorded unemployment The authors argue that an understanding of these effects is vital to urban policy and area regeneration as well as to a range of national economic and social policies that are currently insensitive to geographical disparities The focus is at the city wide scale to provide the overview and essential context within which local and neighbourhood level processes and policies need to be located The report suggests that outmigration and outcommuting provide inadequate responses to urban economic problems and that a more thoroughgoing policy of employment expansion is needed The jobs gap in Britain's cities provides a clear and accessible analysis of employment trends and problems and has important implications for many different strands of economic and social policy including policies towards unemployment welfare reform urban regeneration and regional development It is important reading therefore for policy makers at national and local government levels researchers at various levels and teachers in universities and higher education Soziale Stadt – Zwischenbilanzen Uwe-Jens Walther,2013-10-05 Mit dem Programm Die Soziale Stadt reagiert der Staat auf Tendenzen sozialr umlicher Spaltung und Ausgrenzung Es soll wirtschaftliche wie soziale Abw rtsspiralen stoppen das Verwaltungshandeln wirksamer gestalten und b rgerschaftliche Potenziale mobilisieren Der Band liefert erste Einsch tztungen der neuen Praxis und diskutiert deutsche wie europ ische Beispiele ebenso wie Ver nderungen des Sozialstaates Er pr sentiert empirische Analysen und kritische Positionen der Stadtsoziologie als Zwischenbilanz zu einem aktuellen Handlungsfeld von Stadtpolitik und Stadtplanung

Parliament. House of Commons. ODPM: Housing, Planning, Local Government and the Regions Committee,2004 The Committee s report examines the contribution of historic buildings to urban regeneration the role and effectiveness of public agencies responsible for the built environment the impact of the planning system and listing of historic buildings on urban regeneration the role played by government departments to promote the historic environment and fiscal and legislative reform options The Committee concludes that regenerating historic buildings can reinforce a sense of local community and act as a catalyst for urban regeneration However historic buildings cannot be retained as relics of a bygone age but new uses and sensitive adaptations allowed where the original use is no longer viable The report highlights the shortage of conservation officers and the skills deficit in knowledge of regeneration and funding issues It also call on the DCMS and the ODPM to working more closely together on their cross cutting responsibilities in order to boost the potential contributions made by historic buildings to the local economy The current planning system is also criticised for causing delays and uncertainty with developers being subject to as many as nine different regimes including planning controls listed building consent and conservation area controls

Community Economic Development Graham Haughton,2013-12-16 This important book examines the ways in which community economic development can contribute to local and regional regeneration It presents a unique overview of the state of contemporary British practice in this important policy area and provides a series of fresh theoretical methodological and empirical insights which help us to understand ways in which communities are facing up to the challenges of devising and bringing about their own revitalisation Community Economic Development is underpinned by the argument that much conventional regeneration work represents at best a short term fix rather than a long term sustainable solution to the problems of socially excluded communities The emphasis of the book is largely on the British experience with contributions from a rich mix of new and established academics and practitioners
