Pulmonary Surfactant Bengt Robertson, Lambert M. G. van Golde, Joseph J. Batenburg, 1992 There has been a spectacular development in both basic research on the pulmonary surfactant system and the clinical use of surfactant for treatment of lung diseases especially in the neonatal period In particular the molecular biology and physiological roles of the surfactant associated proteins SP A have been clarified during the last few years the structure and functions of these proteins therefore constitute an important hot topic and are reviewed in several chapters of this volume including surface chemistry and ultrastructure of surfactant components the role of surfactant in lung mechanics and alveolar liquid homeostasis and surfactant metabolism and its hormonal control However as mentioned above clinical applications of surfactant research have become increasingly important and are therefore dealt with extensively in the remaining chapters during the last few years to illustrate the fascinating complexity of the surfactant system Hence the main mission of this volume is to catalyze the future development in this field with the exchange of ideas between scientific workers from different disciplines presenting their knowledge and experience in this book including Dr Rufer who as early as 1967 attempted to improve the pressure volume curve of a child dying from RDS using dried surfactant from dogs Drs Enhorn ing and Robertson who were the first to treat rabbit fetuses with surfactant replacement and impressively demonstrated that surfactant improved lung mechanics and Dr Fujiwara who at the end of the 1970 s had already successfully treated the first babies with surfactant replacement and published this work already in 1980 Thus the idea of surfactant replacement therapy is now more or less 20 years old and almost 10 years have passed since the first publication by Dr Fujiwara of his impressive clinical results Up to now September 1988 about 2 200 babies have been treated worldwide with tracheal instillation of surfactant with most promising results The type of surfactant used varies from pure natural extracts from bovine or pig lungs to surfactant extracted from human amniotic fluid to pure phospholipids To date however there is still no surfactant commercially available except in Japan in spite of the fact that it is urgently awaited by neonatologists and intensive care doctors throughout the world This volume is based on the contributions presented at the international congress on Surfactant Replacement Therapy which was held in Rotterdam The Netherlands in November 1987
