Militarism And Organized Labor 1900-1914:

Militarism and Organized Labor, 1900-1914 Philip Sheldon Foner, 1987 Organized Labor and the Military, 1897-1917 David Levin, 1950 To Raise and Discipline an Army Joshua Kastenberg, 2017-04-15 Major General Enoch Crowder served as the Judge Advocate General of the United States Army from 1911 to 1923. In 1915 Crowder convinced Congress to increase the size of the Judge Advocate General's Office, the legal arm of the United States Army, from thirteen uniformed attorneys to more than four hundred. Crowder's recruitment of some of the nation's leading legal scholars as well as former congressmen and state supreme court judges helped legitimize President Woodrow Wilson's wartime military and legal policies. As the United States entered World War I in 1917, the army numbered about 120,000 soldiers. The Judge Advocate General's Office was instrumental in extending the military's reach into the everyday lives of citizens to enable the construction of an army of more than four million soldiers by the end of the war. Under Crowder's leadership, the office was responsible for the creation and administration of the Selective Service Act, under which thousands of men were drafted into military service as well as enforcement of the Espionage Act and wartime prohibition. In this first published history of the Judge Advocate General's Office between the years of 1914 and 1922, Joshua Kastenberg examines not only courts martial but also the development of the laws of war and the changing nature of civil-military relations. The Judge Advocate General's Office influenced the legislative and judicial branches of the government to permit unparalleled assertions of power such as control over local policing functions and the economy. Judge advocates also altered the nature of laws to recognize a person's diminished mental health as a defense in criminal trials, influenced the assertion of US law overseas, and affected the evolving nature of the law of war. This groundbreaking study will appeal to scholars, students, and general readers of US history as well as military, legal, and political historians.

Radicalism in American Silent Films, 1909-1929 Michael Slade Shull, 2015-09-03 This work identifies 436 American silent films released between 1909 and 1929 that engaged the issues of militant labor and revolutionary radicalism. It begins with an extended introduction and analytical chapters that investigate the ways in which the American motion picture industry portrayed the interrelationships between labor radicals, exploitative capitalists, socialist idealists, and Bolsheviks during this critical twenty-year period. Each entry contains a detailed plot synopsis, citations to primary sources, coding indicating the presence or absence of 14 predominant discernible biases, including anti and pro capitalism, socialism, revolution, and labor, and subject coding keyed to 64 related terms and concepts, including agitators, Bolshevism, bombs, female radicals, militias, mobs, political refugees, and strikes. These statistical data included in the filmography are presented in a series of charts and are fully integrated into the historical critical text. Total number and percentage statistics for the instances of these coded biases and traits are given per year, per era, and overall.

Cultures of Militarism Roger Possner, 2008 Government, Industry and Rearmament in Russia, 1900-1914 Peter Gatrell, 1994-03-10 This book provides an economic historian's perspective on major questions that confront all students of

Russian history how stable were the economic and administrative structures of late imperial Russia and how well prepared was Russia for war in 1914 The decade following the Russo Japanese War witnessed profound changes in the political system and in the industrial economy The regime faced challenges to its authority from industrialists caught in the throes of recession and from parliamentary critics of tsarist administration Peter Gatrell provides a comprehensive account of the attempts made by government and business to confront these challenges examining the organisation and performance of a key industry and showing how decisions were reached about the allocation of resources and the far reaching consequences these decisions entailed
