Militarism in a Global Age Dirk Bönker, 2012-03-15 At the turn of the twentieth century the United States and Germany emerged as the two most rapidly developing industrial nation states of the Atlantic world The elites and intelligentsias of both countries staked out claims to dominance in the twentieth century In Militarism in a Global Age Dirk Bonker explores the far reaching ambitions of naval officers before World War I as they advanced navalism a particular brand of modern militarism that stressed the paramount importance of sea power as a historical determinant Aspiring to make their own countries into self reliant world powers in an age of global empire and commerce officers viewed the causes of the industrial nation global influence elite rule and naval power as inseparable. Characterized by both transnational exchanges and national competition the new maritime militarism was technocratic in its impulses its makers cast themselves as members of a professional elite that served the nation with its expert knowledge of maritime and global affairs. American and German navalist projects differed less in their principal features than in their eventual trajectories. Over time the pursuits of these projects channeled the two naval elites in different directions as they developed contrasting outlooks on their bids for world power and maritime force. Combining comparative history with transnational and global history Militarism in a Global Age challenges traditional exceptionalist assumptions about militarism and national identity in Germany and the United States in its exploration of empire and geopolitics warfare and military operational imaginations state formation and national governance and expertise and professionalism. Militarism and the British Left, 1902-1914 M. Johnson, 2013-01-11 Militarism has traditionally been regarded as a phenomenon of the political right. As this book demonstrates however various groups on the political left in Britain during the years before the Great War were able to accommodate and even assimilate militaristic ideas sentiments and policies to a remarkable degree.

Activism, Intimacy and the Politics of Selfhood Kristin M. McGuire, 2004 The Military-State-Society Symbiosis Peter Karsten, 2013-12-16 These five volumes concern one of the most important institutions in human history the military and the interactions of that institution with the greater society. Military systems serve nations they may also reflect them. Soldiers are enlisted they may also be said to self select. Military units have missions they also have interests. In an older more traditional military history while the second reflects a newer approach. Although each statement in the pairs may be said to be true the former speak from the framework of the military sciences the latter from the framework of the social and behavioral sciences. The military systems of our past differ from one another over time in political origins size missions and technological and tactical fashions but to a great extent their historical experiences have been more noticeably similar than they were different. When we ask questions about the recruiting training or motivating of military systems or of those systems interactions with civilian governments and with the greater society as do the essays in these five volumes of reading on The Military and Society we are struck by the almost timeless patterns of continuity and similarity of experience. In each of these volumes approximately half of the essays selected deal with the experience in the United States the other half with the experiences of other states and times enabling the reader to engage in comparative analysis. The British Military Revolution of the 19th Century Daniel R. LeClair, 2019-11-11 From the Crimean War through the Second Boer War the British Empire sought to solve the Great Gun Question to harness improvements to ordnance small arms explosives and mechanization made possible by the Industrial Revolution. The British public played a surprising but overlooked role offering myriad suggestions for improvements to the civilian led War Office. Meanwhile politicians and army leaders argued over control of the country's ground forces in a decades long struggle that did not end until reforms of 1904 put the military under the Secretary of State.

for War Following the debate in the press voters put pressure on both Parliament and the War Office to modernize ordnance and military administration The Great Gun Question was as much about weaponry as about who ultimately controlled military power Drawing on ordnance committee records and contemporary news reports this book fills a gap in the history of British military technology and army modernization prior to World War I The Oxford Handbook of Gender, War, and the Western World since 1600 Karen Hagemann, Stefan Dudink, Sonya O. Rose, 2020-10-30 To date the history of military and war has focused predominantly on men as historical agents disregarding gender and its complex interrelationships with war and the military The Oxford Handbook of Gender War and the Western World since 1600 investigates how conceptions of gender have contributed to the shaping of war and the military and were transformed by them Covering the major periods in warfare since the seventeenth century the Handbook focuses on Europe and the long term processes of colonization and empire building in the Americas Asia Africa and Australia Thirty two essays written by leading international scholars explore the cultural representations of war and the military war mobilization and war experiences at home and on the battle front Essays address the gendered aftermath and memories of war as well as gendered war violence Essays also examine movements to regulate and prevent warfare the consequences of participation in the military for citizenship and challenges to ideals of Western military masculinity posed by female gay and lesbian soldiers and colonial soldiers of color The Oxford Handbook of Gender War and the Western World since 1600 offers an authoritative account of the intricate relationships between gender warfare and military culture across time and space The First Socialization Debate (1918) and Early Efforts Towards Socialization Jürgen Backhaus, Günther Chaloupek, Hans A. Frambach, 2019-05-30 This book discusses the 1918 European socialization debate its consequences and its relevance a century later Following the end of the First World War the disastrous social and economic situation facing Europe led to calls for socialization of central economic sectors as well as measures for the improvement of work conditions and social security This book rekindles the debate presenting the basic issues of socialization from different European countries and taking into account current developments The chapters track the socialism debate in Europe from its initial inception in 1918 and examine the ways in which it has shaped the public discourse in the years following drawing theoretical connections between the conditions that created the environment for the debate to begin and contemporary social and political trends This book will be of particular interest to graduate students and researchers of socioeconomics ethics the history of economic thought history and political science John M. Schofield and the Politics of Generalship Donald B. Connelly, 2006-12-08 In the first full biography of Lieutenant General John McAllister Schofield 1831 1906 Donald B Connelly examines the career of one of the leading commanders in the western theater during the Civil War In doing so Connelly illuminates the role of politics in the formulation of military policy during both war and peace in the latter half of the nineteenth century Connelly relates how Schofield as a department commander during the war had to cope with contending political factions that sought to shape military and civil policies Following the war Schofield occupied every senior position in the army including secretary of war and commanding general of the army and became a leading champion of army reform and professionalism He was the first senior officer to recognize that professionalism would come not from the separation of politics and the military but from the army's accommodation of politics and the often contentious American constitutional system Seen through the lens of Schofield's extensive military career the history of American civil military relations has seldom involved conflict between the military and civil authority Connelly argues The central question has never been whether to have civilian control but rather which civilians have a say in the formulation and execution of policy

War and Revolution Domenico Losurdo, 2015-02-03 War and Revolution identifies and takes to task a reactionary trend among contemporary historians one that's grown increasingly apparent in recent years It's a revisionist tendency discernible in the work of authors such as Ernst Nolte who traces the impetus behind the Holocaust to the excesses of the Russian Revolution or Francois Furet who links the Stalinist purges to an illness originating with the French Revolution The intention of these revisionists is to eradicate the revolutionary tradition Their true motives have little to do with the quest for a greater understanding of the past but lie in the climate of the present day and the ideological needs of the political classes

as is most clearly seen now in the work of the Anglophone imperial revivalists Paul Johnson and Niall Ferguson In this vigorous riposte to those who would denigrate the history of emancipatory struggle Losurdo captivates the reader with a tour de force account of modern revolt providing a new perspective on the English American French and twentieth century revolutions Books in Print ,1991 Blood and Debt Miguel Angel Centeno,2015-08-26 What role does war play in political development Our understanding of the rise of the nation state is based heavily on the Western European experience of war Challenging the dominance of this model Blood and Debt looks at Latin America s much different experience as more relevant to politics today in regions as varied as the Balkans and sub Saharan Africa The book s illuminating review of the relatively peaceful history of Latin America from the late eighteenth through the early twentieth centuries reveals the lack of two critical prerequisites needed for war a political and military culture oriented toward international violence and the state institutional capacity to carry it out Using innovative new data such as tax receipts naming of streets and public monuments and conscription records the author carefully examines how war affected the fiscal development of the state the creation of national identity and claims to citizenship Rather than building nation states and fostering democratic citizenship he shows war in Latin America destroyed institutions confirmed internal divisions and killed many without purpose or glory

Military Integration After Civil Wars Florence Gaub,2010-09-13 This book examines the role of multiethnic armies in post conflict reconstruction and demonstrates how they can promote peacebuilding efforts The author challenges the assumption that multiethnic composition leads to weakness of the military and shows how a multiethnic army is frequently the impetus for peacemaking in multiethnic societies Three case studies Nigeria Lebanon and Bosnia Herzegovina determine that rather than external factors it is the internal structures that make or break the military institution in a socially challenging environment The book finds that where the political will is present the multiethnic military can become a symbol of reconciliation and coexistence Furthermore it shows that the military as a professional identity can supersede ethnic considerations and thus facilitates cooperation within the armed forces despite a hostile post conflict setting In this the book challenges widespread theories about ethnic identities and puts professional identities on an equal footing with them The book will be of great interest to students of military studies ethnic conflict conflict studies and peacebuilding and IR in general Florence Gaub is a Researcher and Lecturer at the NATO Defence College in Rome She holds a PhD in International Politics from Humboldt University Berlin
