This book examines the impact of American perceptions of the military balance between the United States and the Soviet Union during the key period of 1976-1985. That decade witnessed the decline of the US-Soviet détente and the resurgence of superpower confrontation often called the Second Cold War. Among the factors contributing to this shift was the American view of the military balance: whether the United States had been or was being overtaken by the Soviet Union in terms of military capability. Since then the military balance has been viewed within the overall context of issues impacting superpower relations during this era. David Walsh examines the full range of issues: strategic and European-based forces, power projection capabilities and military spending and their role in shaping perceptions not just of the military balance but also in such key areas of international relations as arms control, transatlantic diplomacy and Third World conflict. In doing so he shows how the perceptions of the 1970s contributed to key policy decisions in the 1980s which themselves played a significant role in bringing the Cold War to an end. The Military Balance in the Cold War will be of interest to advanced students of Cold War history, strategic studies, US foreign policy and international relations in general.

The Changing Military Balance in the Koreas and Northeast Asia Anthony H. Cordesman, Aaron Lin, 2015-07-07. The tensions between the Koreas and the potential involvement of China, Japan, Russia and the United States in a Korean conflict create a nearly open-ended spectrum of possible conflicts. These conflicts could range from posturing and threats to a major conventional conflict on the Korean peninsula with intervention by outside powers to the extreme of nuclear conflict. The Korean balance is also affected by the uncertain mix of cooperation and competition between the United States and China, particularly with the US pivot toward Asia and the steady modernization of Chinese forces. This new volume, up to date through Spring 2015, provides a detailed examination of the military forces in Northeast Asia: North and South Korea, China, Russia, Japan and the United States, setting those forces in the larger geostrategic context.
