Military History And The Military Profession:

The Past as Prologue Williamson Murray, Richard Hart Sinnreich, 2006-05-08 In today's military of rapid technological and strategic change obtaining a complete understanding of the present let alone the past is a formidable challenge Yet the very high rate of change today makes study of the past more important than ever before The Past as Prologue first published in 2006 explores the usefulness of the study of history for contemporary military strategists It illustrates the great importance of military history while simultaneously revealing the challenges of applying the past to the present Essays from authors of diverse backgrounds British and American civilian and military come together to present an overwhelming argument for the necessity of the study of the past by today's military leaders in spite of these challenges The essays of Part I examine the relationship between history and the military profession Those in Part II explore specific historical cases that show the repetitiveness of certain military problems Military History and the Military Profession David Charters, David Anderson Charters, Marc Milner, J. B. Wilson, 1992-10-26 This volume examines the state of the art in modern military history and the utility of the subject as a training educational and policy relevant tool for professional armed forces Part 1 explores the state of military historical writing in Britain and the United States and on specific topics such as air warfare naval warfare intelligence low intensity conflict and the most recent trends in the New Military History Part 2 illustrates the utility of the historical method in analyzing command decisions providing an institutional memory for a wide range of policy command and operational problems and its application in specific subjects such as naval strategy and by certain countries the US Germany and the Soviet Union in the search for lessons and fundamental principles The contributing authors represent an impressive cross section of prominent academic and official historians recognized as leading scholars in the study of military history The Foreword is written by Anne N Foreman Undersecretary of the United States Air Force This book will be of interest to the academic and the official historian and their students and to military professionals The US Military Profession Into the Twenty-first Century Sam Charles Sarkesian, Robert E. Connor, 1999 Addresses US military professionalism and the revisions modifications and changes necessary to respond to the changed domestic and strategic environments of the new world order An American Profession of Arms William B. Skelton, 1992 Following the formation of a regular army in 1784 a popular distrust of military power and the generally unsettled nature of national administration kept the army in a continual state of fluctuation both in terms of organisation and size Few officers were making a long term commitment to military service But by 1860 a professional army career was becoming a way of life In that year 41.5 percent of officers had served 30 years compared to only 2.6 percent in 1797 The Military in the Service of the State Sir John Hackett, 1970 The Military Profession Charles A. Leggett, 1982 Perspectives in the History of Military Education and Professionalism Richard A. Preston, 1980 Past as Prologue Williamson Murray, 2006 In today's military of rapid technological and strategic change obtaining a complete understanding of the present let alone the past is a formidable challenge Yet the very high rate of change today makes study of the past more important than ever before The Past as Prologue first published in 2006 explores the usefulness of the study of history for contemporary military strategists It illustrates the great importance of military history while simultaneously revealing the challenges of applying the past to the present Essays from authors of diverse backgrounds British and American c Military History Sir John Hackett,1986

Transformation in Russian and Soviet Military History Carl Reddel,Col Carl W Reddel Usaf,2012-05-27 The Russian physical environment is unique in space and degree Understanding the impact of this frontier on the Russian military profession may contribute to understanding how national security has posed planning problems unique to the Soviet military profession The essential transformation which occurred in Russian and Soviet military history was the mastery of modernization in the interest of Russian national security a fact that is indirectly demonstrated by the essays of this book This relationship between the military and the process of modernization is inseparable because of the multifaceted nature of modern war which is total war in that no dimension of human experience or activity escapes it The proper investigation and understanding of Russian and Soviet military history mat contribute to other changes possible in the broad appreciate of Russian history and in the general field of Soviet studies The Future of the Army Profession Lloyd J. Present Day Jeffery Charlston, 2017-11-22 Explaining America's rise as a global military power challenges the methodologies of military history This volume looks beyond the major conflicts covered elsewhere in the Library to explore the operational conceptual technological and cultural forces that shaped the United States military after the American Civil War Individual articles reflect the wide range of topics and approaches that contribute to the growing understanding of the American military and its relationship with its parent society

Military History for the Military Professional, 1972 Two decades ago at the height of the Korean conflict a renowned military historian claimed that military history as a specialty had largely lost its function If military history is to have more than antiquarian interest it must it would seem turn away from the study of past wars to the study of war itself in its broadest possible terms declared Walter Millis Since that time professional historians who devote their careers to analysis of military affairs have worked to refute Millis contention At the same time they have tried to overcome the aversion of their colleagues to military history Lately antagonism toward war in general and to the war in Vietnam in particular have further blurred any signs of progress Some blame for the rejection of military history rests with military historians themselves Often they have reflected Millis impression that his compatriots were adrift unsure of their destination and uncertain as to whether they were even carrying the correct cargo Millis thought that military history should become less military and more civilian It would have to make better use of the resources of political philosophy economics and sociology as well as the applied sciences He felt that its success as a useful discipline would depend upon its return to the general study of man and his society Twenty years after Millis stricture it seems that the guild of military historians continues to suffer from the old malaise

Military History Readings Pamphlet, 1987 The Harmon Memorial Lectures in Military History, 1988-2017 Air University Air University Press, 2020-04-21 The Harmon Memorial Lecture is the oldest and longest running lecture series at the United States Air Force Academy occurring continuously on an annual basis since the spring of 1959 before this institution had even graduated its first class It is a fitting tribute to the man many consider to be the father of the Air Force Academy its first superintendent Lt Gen Hubert R Harmon General Harmon understood that the serious study of military history was an essential element of the military profession and he was a strong supporter of the two main goals of the series stimulating cadets to develop a lifelong interest in the history of the military profession and promoting the development and dissemination of military history for the benefit of all American citizens Each year the Academy's Department of History selects a leading military historian to present the Harmon Memorial Lecture to all cadets enrolled in the military history courses offered that term For many years these lectures were printed and disseminated individually across the Academy the Air Force and throughout academia In 1988 Lt Col Harry Borowski then a faculty member in the Department of History edited a volume containing the first 30 years of Harmon Lectures This volume picks up where Lieutenant Colonel Borowski left off presenting the next 30 years of Harmon Lectures for the benefit of cadets faculty and staff the Air Force scholars throughout academia and all persons interested in military history throughout the world Each of these volumes includes the work and wisdom of the finest military historians of their eras the contributors represent a veritable Hall of Fame of military historians from 1959 to 2017 General Harmon understood that military history served a special purpose for those in the American military profession encouraging a warrior ethos developing a deeper understanding of the profession of arms and providing the context so absolutely essential for those entrusted with the security of the American Republic I m confident that readers from a wide variety of backgrounds will agree that this volume fully supports its intended purpose
