Dietary reference values for energy Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition, 2012-05-02 Dietary reference values DRVs for energy are based on estimating the total energy expenditure TEE for groups of people TEE provides a measure of the energy requirement at energy balance i.e. when energy intake matches energy expenditure The methodology to measure TEE the doubly labelled water DLW method has advanced and as a result the evidence base on TEE in a wide variety of population groups has expanded considerably With the high levels of overweight and obesity currently seen in the UK and the wealth of new data now available it was considered timely for the Scientific Advisory Committee on Nutrition SACN to review recommendations for the UK population This report details the evidence and approaches SACN have considered in order to update the DRVs for energy SACN chose a prescriptive approach to estimating energy reference values suitable reference body weight ranges consistent with long term good health were used to calculate energy reference values Thus basal metabolic rate BMR values were predicted using healthy reference body weights Using this approach if overweight groups consume the amount of energy recommended for healthy weight groups they are likely to lose weight whereas underweight sections of the population should gain weight towards the healthy body weight range SACN has derived new energy reference values For most population groups except for infants and young children the values have increased DRVs should be used to assess the energy requirements for large groups of people and populations but should not be applied to individuals due to the large variation in physical activity and energy expenditure observed between people

Nutrition and Physical Activity Nicole Wolfram, Michael Rigby, Michael Sjöström, Rosa G. Frazzica, Wilhelm Kirch, 2008-09-23 One important reason for the multitude of research activities in this field is because physical inactivity and nutrition are significant risk factors for many common non communicable diseases During the past decades physical inactivity and high dietary fat intakes have become increasingly prevalent in people's daily lives in industrialised countries To prevent and to tackle these major diseases there is a need for a much better understanding of the basic biological and underlying patho physiological processes as well as more relevant baseline data describing food intakes and physical activity habits amongst the general population Being aware of the importance of nutrition and physical activity for health status a multitude of projects with different scopes and methodologies has arisen This variety makes it necessary to bring the results of these activities into a coordinated framework

Moy,Richard W. Vannoort,2013-11-08 Unless a food is grossly contaminated consumers are unable to detect through sight or smell the presence of low levels of toxic chemicals in their

foods Furthermore the toxic effects of exposure to low levels of chemicals are often manifested slowly sometimes for decades as in the case of cancer or organ failure As a result safeguarding food from such hazards requires the constant monitoring of the food supply using sophisticated laboratory analysis While the food industry bears the primary responsibility for assuring the safety of its products the overall protection of people s diets from chemical hazards must be considered one of the most important public health functions of any government Unfortunately many countries do not have sufficient capability and capacity to monitor the exposure of their populations to many potentially toxic chemicals that could be present in food and drinking water Without such monitoring public health authorities in many countries are not able to identify and respond to problems posed by toxic chemicals which may harm their population and undermine consumer confidence in the safety of the food supply From a trade perspective those countries that cannot demonstrate that the food they produce is free of potentially hazardous chemicals will be greatly disadvantaged or even subject to sanctions in the international marketplace The goal of a total diet study TDS is to provide basic information on the levels and trends of exposure to chemicals in foods as consumed by the population In other words foods are processed and prepared as typical for a country before they are analyzed in order to better represent actual dietary intakes Total diet studies have been used to assess the safe use of agricultural chemicals e g pesticides antibiotics food additives e g preservatives sweetening agents environmental contaminants e g lead mercury arsenic cadmium PCBs dioxins processing contaminants e g acrylamide polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons chloropropanols and natural contaminants e g aflatoxin patulin other mycotoxins by determining whether dietary exposure to these chemicals are within acceptable limits Total diet studies can also be applied to certain nutrients where the goal is to assure intakes are not only below safe upper limits but also above levels deemed necessary to maintain good health International and national organizations such as the World Health Organization the European Food Safety Agency and the US Food and Drug Administration recognize the TDS approach as one of the most cost effective means of protecting consumers from chemicals in food for providing essential information for managing food safety including food standards and for setting priorities for further investment and study Total Diet Studies introduces the TDS concept to a wider audience and presents the various steps in the planning and implementation of a TDS It illustrates how TDSs are being used to protect public health from chemicals in the food supply in many developed and developing countries The book also examines some of the applications of TDSs to specific chemicals including contaminants and nutrients
