Genetics and Tuberculosis Derek Chadwick, Gail Cardew, 1998 Genetics and Tuberculosis Chairman Douglas Young 1998 More people die each year from tuberculosis than from any other infectious disease the annual death toll being almost three million over 95% of which are in developing countries with eight million new cases being diagnosed every year It is estimated that one third of the world s population nearly two billion people is now infected of which 5 10% will develop the disease In 1993 the World Health Organization recognized tuberculosis as a global health emergency the first time that a disease had ever been marked in this way The emergence of drug resistant forms of the disease combined with the paucity of new drugs makes the challenge of understanding and combating the disease especially urgent This book explores the interplay between the Mycobacterium and its host by focusing on the research currently underway on the sequencing of the genome of Mycobacterium tuberculosis and on the genetic and epidemiological studies of communities exposed to the disease and on related animal models From a synthesis of these data new insights into the understanding of the pathogenesis prevention and treatment of tuberculosis emerge Genetics and Tuberculosis Gail Cardew, 1998 Genetics and Tuberculosis Chairman Douglas Young 1998 More people die each year from tuberculosis than from any other infectious disease the annual death toll being almost three million over 95 per cent of which are in developing countries with eight million new cases being diagnosed every year It is estimated that one third of the world s population nearly two billion people is now infected of which 5 10 per cent will develop the disease In 1993 the World Health Organization recognized tuberculosis as a global health emergency the first time that a disease had ever been marked in this way The emergence of drug resistant forms of the disease combined with the paucity of new drugs makes the challenge of understanding and combating the disease especially urgent This book explores the interplay between the Mycobacterium and its host by focusing on the research currently underway on the sequencing of the genome of Mycobacterium tuberculosis and on the genetic and epidemiological studies of communities exposed to the disease and on related animal models From a synthesis of these data new insights into the understanding of the pathogenesis prevention and treatment of tuberculosis emerge

High Quality Genome-scale Metabolic Network Reconstruction of Mycobacterium Tuberculosis and Comparison with Human Metabolic Network Saowalak Kalapanulak,Igor Goryanin,Hongwu Ma,2009 Mycobacterium tuberculosis Mtb a pathogenic bacterium is the causative agent in the vast majority of human tuberculosis TB cases Nearly one third of the world s population has been affected by TB and annually two million deaths result from the disease Because of the high cost of medication for a long term treatment with multiple drugs and the increase of multidrug resistant Mtb strains faster acting drugs and more effective vaccines are urgently demanded Several metabolic pathways of Mtb are attractive for identifying novel drug targets against TB Hence a high quality genome scale metabolic network of Mtb HQMtb was reconstructed to investigate its whole metabolism and explore for new drug targets The HQMtb metabolic network was constructed using an unbiased approach by extracting gene annotation information from various databases and consolidating the data with information from literature The HQMtb consists of 686 genes 607 intracellular reactions 734 metabolites and 471 E C numbers 27 of which are incomplete The HQMtb was compared with two recently published Mtb metabolic models GSMN TB by Beste et al and iNJ661 model by Jamshidi and Palsson Due to the different reconstruction methods used the three models have different characteristics The 68 new genes and 80 new E C numbers were found only in the HQMtb and resulting in approximately 52 new metabolic reactions located in various metabolic pathways for example biosynthesis of steroid fatty acid metabolism and TCA cycle Through a comparison of HQMtb with a previously published human metabolic network EHMN in terms of protein signatures 42 Mtb metabolic genes were proposed as new drug targets based on two criteria a their protein functional sites do not match with any human protein functional sites b they are essential genes Interestingly 13 of them are found in a list of current validated drug targets Among all proposed drug targets Rv0189c Rv3001c and Rv3607c are of interest to be tested in the laboratory because they were also proposed as drug target candidates from two research groups using different methods
