

What are vulnerable populations?

- The Emergency Management National Response Framework says “special needs” populations may have additional needs before, during and after an incident in functional areas, such as:
 - Maintaining independence
 - Communication
 - Transportation
 - Supervision
 - Medical care

They are often constrained by:

- Poverty
- Physical or mental disability
- Health issues
- Low English proficiency
- Transportation disadvantage
- Age

and especially by combinations of these.

Disaster Risk Reduction for Resilience Saeid Eslamian,Faezeh Eslamian,2023-03-29 This book is part of a six volume series on Disaster Risk Reduction and Resilience The series aims to fill in gaps in theory and practice in the Sendai Framework and provides additional resources methodologies and communication strategies to enhance the plan for action and targets proposed by the Sendai Framework. The series will appeal to a broad range of researchers, academics, students, policy makers and practitioners in engineering, environmental science and geography, geoscience, emergency management, finance, community adaptation, atmospheric science and information technology. This volume offers indigenous approaches to disaster risk reduction, community sustainability and climate change resilience, as well as agro-ecological innovations for improving resilience to climate change. The focus is on adaptation strategies for sustainable terrestrial and marine ecosystems to reduce the impacts of anthropogenic factors that exacerbate disaster risk, including hydro-meteorological services for climate resilience, food security measures in agriculture and livestock, flood mitigation plans and increased climate change education and awareness. The book concludes with three case studies in Africa detailing the impacts of strengthened climate change resilience measures, adaptive social protections and improved water availability through hydro-electric technologies.

Globalization and Health Inequities in Latin America Ligia Malagón de Salazar, Roberto Carlos Luján Villar, 2018-04-16. This book critically analyses the influence of international policies and guidelines on the performance of interventions aimed at reducing health inequities in Latin America, with special emphasis on health promotion and health in all policies strategies. While the implementation of these interventions plays a key role in strengthening these countries' capacity to respond to current and future challenges, the urgency and pressures of cooperation and funding agencies to show results consistent with their own agendas not only hampers this goal but also makes the territory invisible, hiding the real problems faced by most Latin American countries, diminishing the richness of local knowledge production and hindering the development of relevant proposals that consider the territory's conditions and cultural identity. Departing from this general analysis, the authors search for answers to the following questions: Why, despite the importance of the theoretical advances regarding actions to address social and health inequities, haven't Latin American countries been able to produce the expected results? Why do successful initiatives only take place within the framework of pilot projects? Why does the ideology of health promotion and health in all policies mainly permeate structures of the health sector but not other sectors? Why are intersectoral actions conjunctural initiatives which often fail to evolve into permanent practices? Based on an extensive literature review, case studies, personal experiences and interviews with key informants in the region, Globalization and Health Inequities in Latin America presents a strategy that uses monitoring and evaluation practices for enhancing the capacity of Latin American and other low and middle income countries to implement sustainable processes to foster inclusiveness, equity, social justice and human rights. p pp
