in Iraq - for my son Jason Powell, 2012-11-25 Jason Powell's prose account of his time in Iraq belongs with those of the poets Robert Graves, Siegfried Sassoon and David Jones with whom he shared the distinction of being a soldier of the Royal Welsh. Describing intimately the major incidents of the final bitter months of the British occupation of Iraq and told from an insistently personal point of view, the account ends with the certainty of salvation. Race, War, and Surveillance Mark Ellis, 2001-07-26 In April 1917 black Americans reacted in various ways to the entry of the United States into World War I in the name of Democracy. Some expressed loud support, many were indifferent, and others voiced outright opposition. All were agreed, however, that the best place to start guaranteeing freedom was at home. Almost immediately rumors spread across the nation that German agents were engaged in Negro Subversion and that African Americans were potentially disloyal. Despite mounting a constant watch on black civilians, their newspapers, and their organizations, the domestic intelligence agents of the federal government failed to detect any black traitors or saboteurs. They did, however, find vigorous demands for equal rights to be granted and for the 30-year epidemic of lynching in the South to be eradicated. In Race War and Surveillance, Mark Ellis examines the interaction between the deep-seated fears of many white Americans about a possible race war and their profound ignorance about the black population. The result was a black scare that lasted well beyond the war years. Mark Ellis is Senior Lecturer in History at the University of Strathclyde, Glasgow, Scotland. June 2001. 256 pages. 6 1/8 x 9 1/4 index. Append. Cloth. 0 253 33923 5 39 95 s 30 50.
