Population Dynamics of a Philippine Rain Forest People John D. Early, Thomas N. Headland, 1998 An important and significant contribution to anthropology Barry S Hewlett Washington State University The Agta Negrito people have been hunters and gatherers in the tropical rain forests of the Philippines for centuries This book investigates a small group of the Agta living on Luzon Island during their transition from a foraging society to a landless group of agricultural workers The core of the book is a demographic study of fertility mortality and migration over a 44 year period It is one of only two studies that have completely reconstructed the population dynamics of a foraging group without relying on mathematical models Ethnographic and narrative historical sections of the book establish the contexts for the demographic data and enhance the study's readability As a case history of social and population dynamics in a remote frontier region the work describes the impact of international commercial interests on both the rain forest and the landless peasantry seeking to survive The work is of exceptional value because of the difficulties of obtaining reliable demographic data from a foraging group and for the long term coverage of the quantitative database John D Early retired professor of anthropology at Florida Atlantic University Boca Raton is the author of several books most recently with John F Peters The Population Dynamics of the Mucjai Yanomama Thomas N Headland adjunct professor of linguistics at the University of Texas at Arlington and anthropology consultant for the Summer Institute of Linguistics is the coeditor of Tropical Deforestation The Human Dimension and of Emics and Ethics The Insider Outsider Debate Life Histories of the Dobe !Kung Nancy Howell, 2010-05-06 Life Histories of the Dobe Kung re examines an important anthropological data set for the Dobe Kung the well known Bushmen of the Kalahari Desert collected by Nancy Howell and colleagues Using life history analysis Howell reinterprets this rich material to address the question of how these hunter gatherers maintain their notably good health from childhood through old age in the Kalahari's harsh environment She divides the population into life history stages that correlate with estimated chronological ages and demonstrates how and why they survive even thrive on a modest allotment of calories She describes how surplus food is produced and distributed and she considers both the motives for the generous sharing she has observed among the Dobe Kung and some evolutionary implications of that behavior Demography and Evolutionary Ecology of Hadza Hunter-Gatherers Nicholas Blurton Jones, 2016-01-21 The Hadza an ethnic group indigenous to northern Tanzania are one of the few remaining hunter gatherer populations Archaeology shows 130 000 years of hunting and gathering in their land but Hadza are rapidly losing areas vital to their way of life This book offers a unique opportunity to capture a disappearing lifestyle Blurton Jones interweaves data from ecology demography and evolutionary ecology to present a comprehensive analysis of the Hadza foragers Discussion centres on expansion of the adaptationist perspective beyond topics customarily studied in human behavioural ecology to interpret a wider range of anthropological concepts Analysing behavioural aspects with a specific focus on relationships and their wider impact on the population this book reports the demographic consequences of different patterns of marriage and the availability of helpers such as husbands children and grandmothers Essential for researchers and graduate students alike this book will challenge preconceptions of human sociobiology

Hunters and Gatherers in the Modern World Megan Biesele,Robert K. Hitchcock,Peter P. Schweitzer,2000-04-01 In an age of heightened awareness of the threat that western industrialized societies pose to the environment hunters and gatherers attract particularly strong interest because they occupy the ecological niches that are constantly eroded Despite the denial of sovereignty the world s more than 350 million indigenous peoples continue to assert aboriginal title to significant portions of the world s remaining bio diversity As a result conflicts between tribal peoples and nation states are on the increase Today many of the societies that gave the field of anthropology its empirical foundations and unique global vision of a diverse and evolving humanity are being destroyed as a result of national economic political and military policies Although quite a sizable body of literature exists on the living conditions of the hunters and gatherers this volume is unique in that it represents the first extensive east west scholarly exchange in anthropology since the demise of the USSR Moreover it also offers new perspectives from indigenous communities and scholars in an exchange that be termed south north as opposed to north north denoting the predominance of northern Europe and North America in scholarly debate The main focus of this volume is on the internal dynamics and political strategies of hunting and gathering societies in areas of self determination and self representation More specifically it examines areas such as warfare and conflict resolution resistance identity and the state demography and ecology gender and representation and world view and religion It raises a large number of major issues of common concerns and therefore makes important reading for all those interested in human rights issues ethnic conflict grassroots development and community organization and environmental topics
