Martin Bulmer,John Solomos,2020-05-21 The main objective of this edited collection is to provide an insight into key facets of contemporary research and scholarship on race and ethnicity The various chapters were presented at a conference to celebrate the 40th Anniversary of the international journal Ethnic and Racial Studies Given this context contributors reflect on the evolution of scholarship over the past five decades and look forward to the range of issues that we shall need to research and understand more fully in the future In doing so they both provide an overview of the shifting boundaries of the field of ethnic and racial studies and display an engagement with emerging fields of scholarship and research The volume brings together leading scholars who have experience of researching race and ethnicity in various parts of the globe and combines conceptual reflection with empirically focused analysis This book was originally published as a special issue of Ethnic and Racial Studies Topographies of Caribbean Writing, Race, and the British Countryside Joanna Johnson,2019-01-04 How do Caribbean writers see the British countryside Do they feel included ignored marginalised In Topographies of Caribbean Writing Race and the British Countryside Joanna Johnson shows how writers like Derek Walcott V S Naipaul Jean Rhys Grace Nichols Andrea Levy and Caryl Phillips have very different and unexpected responses to this rural space Johnson demonstrates how Caribbean writing shows greater complexity and wider significance than accounts and understandings of the British countryside have traditionally admitted at the same time close examination of these works illustrates that complexity and ambiguity remain an essential part of these authors relationships with the British countryside of their colonial or postcolonial imaginations This study examines accepted norms and raises questions about urgent issues of belonging Britishness and Commonwealth identity Muslim Schools, Communities and Critical Race Theory Damian Breen,2017-10-18 This book explores the position of Muslim schools in contemporary Britain A Critical Race Theory approach is used to consider some of the specific issues faced by Muslim schools in particular those looking to become state funded The book provides a critically considered and meaningful application of a theory of race to Muslims as a religious community without restricting the analysis to minority ethnic Muslim groups it also provides a counter narrative which contests assumptions about Muslim schools presented in the media and in public debates more generally These insights are positioned against current political climates within which Muslims have been consistently subjected to surveillance and suspicion The book draws on first hand research carried out inside Muslim schools to offer insights into the ways that these schools cater to diverse and locally specific needs It concludes by arguing that independent Islamic schools represent ideal models of community need Therefore bringing such schools into the state sector in a way that allows them to retain autonomy represents an ideal strategy for the educational and political enfranchisement of British Muslims Muslim schooling represents an opportunity for increased state investment in Muslim interests as a strategy for offsetting the ways in which Muslim communities have been marginalised more generally in contemporary political climates The book will make compelling reading for students and researchers in the fields of Education Sociology and Religious Studies particularly those with an interest in faith schools Islam and Critical Race Theory

Yachting, 1980-01 Imagining Britain's Economic Future, c.1800-1975 David Thackeray, Andrew Thompson, Richard Toye, 2018-04-04 Following the Brexit vote this book offers a timely historical assessment of the different ways that Britain's economic future has been imagined and how British ideas have influenced global debates about market relationships over the past two centuries The 2016 EU referendum hinged to a substantial degree on how competing visions of the UK should engage with foreign markets which in turn were shaped by competing understandings of Britain's economic past. The book considers the following inter-related questions: What roles does economic imagination play in shaping people's behaviour and how far can insights from behavioural economics be applied to historical issues of market selection? How useful is the concept of the official mind for explaining the development of market relationships? What has been the relationship between expanding communications and the development of markets? How and why have certain regions or groupings e.g. the Commonwealth been unimagined losing their status as promising markets for the future.

Race Politics in Britain and France Erik Bleich, 2003-05-26

Britain and France have developed substantially different policies to manage racial tensions since the 1960s in spite of having similar numbers of post-war ethnic minority immigrants. This book provides the first detailed historical exploration of race policy development in these two countries. In this path-breaking work, Bleich argues against common wisdom that attributes policy outcomes to the role of powerful interest groups or to the constraints of existing institutions, instead emphasizing the importance of frames as widely held ideas that propelled policymaking in different directions. British policymakers framing of race and racism principally in North American terms of color discrimination encouraged them to import many policies from across the Atlantic. For decades after WWII, by contrast, French policy leaders framed racism in terms influenced largely by their Vichy past, which encouraged policies designed primarily to counter hate speech while avoiding the recognition of race found across the English Channel.
