A World of Their Own Meghan Healy-Clancy, 2014-06-19 The politics of black education has long been a key issue in southern African studies but despite rich debates on the racial and class dimensions of schooling historians have neglected their distinctive gendered dynamics A World of Their Own is the first book to explore the meanings of black women's education in the making of modern South Africa Its lens is a social history of the first high school for black South African women Inanda Seminary from its 1869 founding outside of Durban through the recent past Employing diverse archival and oral historical sources Meghan Healy Clancy reveals how educated black South African women developed a tradition of social leadership by both working within and pushing at the boundaries of state power She demonstrates that although colonial and apartheid governance marginalized women politically it also valorized the social contributions of small cohorts of educated black women This made space for growing numbers of black women to pursue careers as teachers and health workers over the course of the twentieth century After the student uprisings of 1976 as young black men increasingly rejected formal education for exile and street politics young black women increasingly stayed in school and cultivated an alternative form of student politics Inanda Seminary students experiences vividly show how their academic achievements challenged the narrow conceptions of black women s social roles harbored by both officials and black male activists By the transition to democracy in the early 1990s black women outnumbered black men at every level of education introducing both new opportunities for women and gendered conflicts that remain acute today Privileged Precariat Danelle van Zyl-Hermann,2021-04-15 White workers occupied a unique social position in apartheid era South Africa Shielded from black labour competition in exchange for support for the white minority regime their race based status effectively concealed their class based vulnerability Centred on this entanglement of race and class Privileged Precariat examines how South Africa s white workers experienced the dismantling of the racial state and the establishment of black majority rule Starting from the 1970s it shows how apartheid reforms constituted the withdrawal of state support for working class whiteness sending workers in search of new ways to safeguard their interests in a rapidly changing world Danelle van Zyl Hermann tracks the shifting strategies of the blue collar Mineworkers Union culminating in its reinvention by the 2010s as the Solidarity Movement a social movement appealing to cultural nationalism Integrating unique historical and ethnographic evidence with global debates Privileged Precariat offers a chronological and interpretative rethinking of South Africa s recent past and contributes new insights from the Global South to debates on race and class in the era of neoliberalism Urban Inequality Owen Crankshaw,2022-01-27 Based on new evidence that challenges existing theories of urban inequality Crankshaw argues that the changing pattern of earnings and occupational inequality in Johannesburg is better described by the professionalism of employment alongside high levels of chronic unemployment Central to this examination is that the social polarisation hypothesis which is accepted by many is simply wrong in the case of Johannesburg Ultimately Crankshaw posits that the post Fordist post apartheid period is characterised by a completely new division of labour that has caused new forms of racial inequality That racial inequality in the post apartheid period is not the result of the persistence of apartheid era causes but is the result of new causes that have interacted with the historical effects of apartheid to produce new patterns of racial inequality African Sociological Review ,1998 Workers, War & the Origins of Apartheid Peter Alexander,2000 Contradicting earlier accounts this study demonstrates that wartime mechanization and black advancement into semi skilled positions were limited and cannot explain subsequent support for apartheid Pub desc Reconfiguring Identities and Building Territories in India and South Africa Philippe Gervais-Lambony,Frédéric Landy,Sophie Oldfield,2005 Published in association with Centre de Sciences Humaines New Delhi Questions of territory space and identity are critically important in the international geopolitical context as well as central to contemporary research in the social sciences Processes connected with globalization have reconfigured identities and territories at multiple scales connecting and disconnecting places in complex ways and re enforcing old while producing new forms of segregation and polarisation Global processes meet the complex and locally specific South African and Indian geographies of inequality expressed at national regional and local scale

In the South African case a political imperative to transform the legacies of racial inequality from colonial and apartheid rule underscores the centrality of racial identities. However racial discourse and differentiation embodies and at times masks a complex mix of place based gender class and cultural identities expressed in a multi scalar politics of territory. Over 50 years into independent rule Indian identity politics continues to build to a large extent on caste and the intricate ways in which caste affiliation merges with religious socio economic political and place based identities. In both contexts the politics of identity and territory simultaneously unify and divide. The spaces territories and identities re produced in the complex contexts in which the global national regional and local meet lie at the heart of the research from which the papers in this book have been generated. The research investigated the reconfiguration of Indian and South African identities and territories through dialogue primarily between geographers but also other social scientists from India South Africa and France.

International Review of Social History ,1999 History and African Studies Seminar Series ,1997 Journal for studies in economics and econometrics ,2000 Beyond the Apartheid Workplace Eddie Webster,Karl Von Holdt,2005

Has the apartheid workplace changed over the past ten years of democracy in South Africa. In order to answer this question the contributors of this book studied seventeen different workplaces including BMW a state hospital footwear sweatshops and the wine farming industry. The editors broaden the definition of work to cover studies of the informal economy including street traders homeworkers and small rural enterprises. Beyond the Apartheid Workplace shows how South Africa s triple transition towards political democracy economic liberalization and post colonial transformation has generated contradictory pressures at workplace levels. A wide range of managerial strategies and union responses are identified demonstrating both continuities and discontinuities with past practices. These studies reveal a growing differentiation within the world of work between stable formal sector work casualized and outsourced work and informal work where people struggle to make a living on the margins of the formal economy. The majority of workplaces are marked by the persistence and reconfiguration of the apartheid legacy. Deepening poverty and exclusion have been generated among great numbers of workers and their dependents.

South African Labour Bulletin ,1998 Studies on the Social Dimensions of Globalization: South Africa ,2001 Racial Redress & Citizenship in South Africa Adam Habib,Kristina A. Bentley,2008

South Africa s democratic experiment is confronted by a central political dilemma how to advance and address historical injustices while building a single national identity. This issue lies at the heart of many heated debates over issues such as economic policy affirmative action and skills shortages. Government has opted for racially defined redress while many of its critics recommend class as a more appropriate organising principle. The contributors to this volume challenge both perspectives. As both scholars and activists and from a variety of disciplinary backgrounds the authors explore the issues within four broad themes the economy education sport and the civil service. Addressing the scholarly community civil society and government each author brings unique perspectives to the question of redress that is so crucial to the future of South
