Assessing Well-Being

Ed Diener, 2009-06-04 The Sandvik Diener and Seidlitz 1993 paper is another that has received widespread attention because it documented the fact that self report well being scales correlate with a number of other methods of measuring the same concepts such as with reports by knowledgeable informants family and friends experience sampling measurement and the memory for good versus bad life events A single factor was found to underlie measures using different methods and a number of different well being self report measures were found to correlate with the non self report measures Thus although the self report measures of well being are imperfect and can be influenced by response artifacts they have substantial validity as shown by their correlations with measurements based on alternative methods Whereas the Pavot and Diener article reviewed the Satisfaction with Life Scale the Lucas Diener and Larsen 2003 paper reviews various approaches to assessing positive emotions As we wrote in the chapter in this volume in which we present new measures we do not consider any of the existing measures of positive affect to be entirely acceptable for measuring subjective well being in the affect area and that is why we have created and validated a new measure
