

PRINCIPLES OF METAL MANUFACTURING PROCESSES

The background of the book cover is a photograph of a metal fabrication process. It shows a large, glowing orange-yellow molten metal pool, likely from a gas metal arc welding (MIG) process, being applied to a metal structure. A shower of bright sparks is being ejected from the point of contact, creating a dynamic and industrial scene. The lighting is dramatic, with the intense heat of the weld providing the primary light source against a darker, industrial background.
