Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during maximal exercise at the beginning and end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and HRR at rest and during maximal exercise compared to the control group. The control group had no significant change in HR and HRR. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

Dissemination (B-Pathway): $<1\%$ only, 20 specimens Substrate: Reported to occur most frequently on soil, but also on decaying wood from "highly degraded" timber (Timothy, 1980).
 In addition, it has been found that this fungus is very common in soil under decaying wood (Timothy, 1980).

Remarks: This may be considered a very common substrate growing in the soil under the forest floor. However, it may occur within the growth of saprophytic fungi and plants, even in other growth, resulting in the full maturity of the 100-year-old substrate in 10 days.

Disinfectants: Disinfectants are chemical agents that destroy or inactivate microorganisms on inanimate surfaces. They are used to prevent the spread of infection and are commonly used in hospitals, laboratories, and public places. Disinfectants are classified based on their spectrum of activity and their mode of action. Common disinfectants include bleach (sodium hypochlorite), alcohol, and quaternary ammonium compounds.

Abstract: The authors examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition of 10 sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or a resistance training group (RT). The RT group performed a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program, while the CON group remained sedentary. The RT group showed significant increases in muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition compared to the CON group. The results suggest that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program can effectively improve muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition in sedentary, middle-aged men.
