Religious Methods and Resources in Bioethics P.F. Camenisch, 2013-03-09 A volume on religious theological methods in biomedical ethics inevitably of whether the methodological dimension can be distinct raises the question guished from the various other things that go on in ethical discourse It is difficult to answer this question definitively since many elements in moral conversation can be interpreted in different ways Barbara Hilkert Andolsen illustrates this issue in this volume when she defines one of her crucial categories gender justice as being both procedural and substantive normative This difficulty of finally separating the methodological from the normative arises in many areas of contemporary ethical writing both feminist and otherwise Nevertheless it seems that in many cases we can separate out the methodological issues with considerable precision Albert Jonsen and James Childress achieve just such a sharp focus in their essays This does not mean that a careful dissecting of their papers would not reveal normative elements lurking about their methodological points It is simply to say that the issues they analyze and the positions they take are at least prima facie overwhelmingly methodological They are much more about how we think about ethical matters than they are about what we think about them Religious Methods

Shelp, 2012-12-06 Theologians and theologically educated participants in discussions of bioethics have been placed on the defensive during recent years The dominance of religious perspectives and theological voices that marked the emergence and establishment of bioethics in the late 1960s and 1970s has eroded steadily as philosophers lawyers and others have relativized their role and influence at best or dismissed it entirely at worst The secularization of bioethics which has occurred for a variety of reasons has prompted some prominent writers to reflect on what has been lost Daniel Callahan for example writes whatever the ultimate truth status of religious perspectives they have provided a way of looking at the world and understanding one's own life that has a fecundity and uniqueness not matched by philosophy law or political theory Those of us who have lost our religious faith may be glad that we have discovered what we take to be the reality of things but we can still recognize that we have also lost something of great value as well the faith vision insights and experience of whole peoples and traditions who no less than we unbelievers struggled to make sense of things That those goods are part of a garment we no longer want to wear does not make their loss anything other than still a loss and it is not a negligible one 2 p
