Special Subcommittee on Investigations, 1976 Organizing for Foreign Policy Crises Patrick Jude Haney, 1997 U S presidents often assemble ad hoc groups of advisers to help them make decisions during foreign policy crises How presidents use these groups and how the groups are structured varies In this landmark study encompassing five presidential administrations Patrick Haney examines how these crisis decision groups were structured and how they performed the tasks of providing information advice and analysis to the president Haney employs case studies to examine the different ways presidents from Truman through Bush used crisis decision making groups to help manage foreign policy crisis

LBJ and the Presidential Management of Foreign Relations Paul Y. Hammond, 2010-07-22 In this insightful study Paul Y Hammond an experienced analyst of bureaucratic politics adapts and extends that approach to explain and evaluate the Johnson administration s performance in foreign relations in terms that have implications for the post Cold War era The book is structured around three case studies of Johnson s foreign policy decision making The first study examines economic and political development It explores the way Johnson handled the provision of economic and food assistance to India during a crisis in India s food policies This analysis provides lessons not only for dealing with African famine in later years but also for assisting Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union The second case study focuses on U S relations with Western Europe at a time that seemed to require a major change in the NATO alliance Here Hammond illuminates the process of policy innovation particularly the costs of changing well established policies that embody an elaborate network of established interests The third case study treats the Vietnam War with special emphasis on how Johnson decided what to do about Vietnam Hammond critiques the rich scholarship available on Johnson s advisory process based on his own reading of the original sources These case studies are set in a larger context of applied theory that deals more generally with presidential management of foreign relations examining a president s potential for influence on the one hand and the constraints on his or her capacity to control and persuade on the other It will be important reading for all scholars and policymakers interested in the limits and possibilities of presidential power in the post Cold War era

Making of Canadian Food Aid Policy Mark W. Charlton, 1992-10-23 Since the Colombo Plan in the early 1950s food aid has been an important and highly visible component of the Canadian development assistance program Until the early 1970s however the Canadian food aid program was little more than a loosely connected collection of disparate programs designed to meet a host of sometimes conflicting objectives In the wake of the world food crisis of 1972-75 a growing number of groups began to question the developmental effectiveness of food aid In response the Canadian government undertook an extensive review and assessment of its food aid program which resulted in a series of new policy initiatives designed to change both the substance of food aid programs and the manner in which they were administered These changes marked a watershed in the history of the Canadian food aid program setting out the fundamental policy themes that have been consolidated and refined in the 1980s and early 1990s
