There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population (Department of Health 1999, 2000).

One of the key issues in the development of strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population is the need to ensure that the health care system is able to meet the needs of the ageing population (Department of Health 1999, 2000).

The purpose of this paper is to review the literature on the needs of the ageing population and to discuss the implications for the health care system.

The paper is organized as follows. First, the needs of the ageing population are reviewed. Then, the implications for the health care system are discussed. Finally, conclusions are drawn.

The needs of the ageing population are reviewed in terms of physical, mental, and social needs. The implications for the health care system are discussed in terms of the need for a multi-disciplinary approach to the care of the ageing population.

The paper concludes that the health care system needs to be able to meet the needs of the ageing population in a multi-disciplinary way.
