postmodernism of Heidegger, Derrida and Wittgenstein. The book brings together some of today's most creative thinking about science. Griffin's introductory essay summarizes the way in which the mechanistic view led to the disenchantment of science and the various reasons for the reversal of this process in our time. The essays on physics, cosmology, biology, ecology, psychosomatic medicine and parapsychology bring out the various dimensions of the re-enchantment of science: the replacement of modern dualism and reductionism with an ecological, organismic paradigm; the priority of internal relations to external; the causal power of experience; the presence of experience, purpose and intrinsic value throughout nature; influence at a distance; the laws of nature as habits; the presence of a divine whole in all the parts; and the history of the universe as a self-creative, meaningful story. This book gives a powerful voice to this emerging movement's proposals for a postmodern science, spirituality and world order.

Examining Ethics in Contemporary Science Education Research Kathrin Otrell-Cass, Maria Andrée, Minjung Ryu, 2020-08-31. This book poses questions on how to work ethically in research on science education. Applying research ethics reflectively and responsibly is fundamental for conducting research with people. It seeks to renew the conversation on how and why to engage with ethics in science education research and to adjust and refine research practices. It highlights both the need for methodological reflections in science education research and the particular ethical research challenges of science education. Science education research involves the study of people, often young and vulnerable people, and their practices. Researchers working within humanities and social science research commonly follow guidelines and codes of conduct set by country-specific ethics committees. Such guidelines function as a minimal requirement for ethical reflection. This book seeks to engage the community of science education researchers in a conversation on ethics in science education, moving beyond the mere compliance with governmental regulations toward a collective reflection. It asks the question of whether the existing guidelines provided for researchers are keeping up with contemporary realities of the visual presence of individuals in digital spaces. It also asks questions on how participatory research methodologies alters the relations between researchers and practitioners. This book is organized into two parts. Part one is entitled 'Challenging existing norms and practices'. It asks questions such as: What are the conditions of knowledge that shape ethical decision-making? Where is this kind of knowledge coming from? How is this knowledge structured and where are the limitations? How can we justify our beliefs concerning our ethical research actions Part two Epistemological considerations for ethical science education research centres norms and practices of conducting science education research in regard to methods validity and scope
