The Television Code Deborah L. Electric Indiana Carlos Arnaldo Schwantes, 2023-08-15 In the early twentieth century an epic battle was waged across America between the interurban railway and the automobile two technologies that arose at roughly the same time in the late 1890s Nowhere was this conflict more evident than in the Midwest and specifically Indiana where cities of industry such as Indianapolis Gary and Terre Haute were growing faster every day By 1904 Indianapolis had opened the Traction Terminal which was widely acclaimed to be the largest and most impressive interurban station in the world Yet today there is only 90 mile remnant of this one great system still operating within Indiana Featuring over 90 illustrations and featuring contemporary accounts and newspaper articles from the period Electric Indiana is a biographical study of the rise and fall of a onetime important transportation technology that achieved its most impressive development within the Hoosier state

Re-Inventing Labour Law Enforcement Louise Munkholm, 2020-04-30 This monograph investigates current issues in labour law enforcement from a socio legal perspective It analyses how local Italian enforcement actors promote the protection of workers in Prato a city that in recent decades has seen a significant influx of Chinese migrants who run small workshops as part of the local clothing industry Many of the Chinese firms in Prato fail to live up to core labour standards such as maximum working hours health and safety at work and payment of social security contributions The book analyses the strategies and practices employed by three local enforcement actors labour inspectors labour unionists and a new type of labour law consultant in their efforts to assist Chinese firms in improving their level of labour law compliance Combining documentary interview and observational data the book applies theories of legal culture and legal development to address the interaction between law and society It focuses on the operational aspects of law by asking three interrelated research questions How do local enforcement actors promote the protection of workers in Chinese firms in Prato Which tools are employed and which rationalities drive the initiatives The book thereby sheds light upon processes of legal cultural adaptation informing ongoing international and national debates about what can actually be done to combat contemporary gaps in the protection of workers

Tainted Earth Marianne Sullivan, 2014-01-23 Smelting is an industrial process involving the extraction of metal from ore During this process impurities in ore including arsenic lead and cadmium may be released from smoke stacks contaminating air water and soil with toxic heavy metals The problem of public health harm from smelter emissions received little official attention for much of the twentieth century Though people living near smelters periodically complained that their health was impaired by both sulfur dioxide and heavy metals for much of the century there was strong deference to industry claims that smelter operations were a nuisance and not a serious threat to health It was only when the majority of children living near the El Paso Texas smelter were discovered to be lead exposed in the early 1970s that systematic independent investigation of exposure to heavy metals in smelting communities began Following El Paso an even more serious lead poisoning epidemic was discovered around the Bunker Hill smelter in northern Idaho In Tacoma Washington a copper smelter exposed children to arsenic a carcinogenic threat Thoroughly grounded in extensive archival research Tainted Earth traces the rise of public health concerns about nonferrous smelting in the western United States focusing on three major facilities Tacoma Washington El Paso Texas and Bunker Hill Idaho Marianne Sullivan documents the response from community residents public health scientists the industry and the government to pollution from smelters as well as the long road to protecting public health and the environment Placing the environmental and public health aspects of smelting in historical context the book connects local incidents to national stories on the regulation of airborne toxic metals The nonferrous smelting industry has left a toxic legacy in the United States and around the world Unless these toxic metals are cleaned up they will persist in the environment and may sicken people children in particular for generations to come The twentieth century struggle to control smelter pollution shares many similarities with public health battles with such industries as tobacco and asbestos where industry supported science created doubt about harm and reluctant government regulators did not take decisive action to protect the public's health

Financial Alchemy in Crisis Anastasia Nesvetailova, 2010-05-07 In July 2007 the combination of a seemingly unstoppable rise in house prices and bullish banks swimming in liquidity meant that almost anyone could get a mortgage in the UK or US Little more than a month later the supply of credit dried up practically overnight leaving the world wondering how bank liquidity could suddenly vanish In Financial Alchemy Anastasia Nesvetailova shows that this liquidity never actually existed The rise of sophisticated financial instruments created what appeared to be an abundance of liquid funds but was in fact a credit pyramid As soon as house prices stopped rising the reality was exposed Nesvetailova's bold and radical analysis explains why the credit crisis was an inevitable consequence of entrusting the world economy to financiers who believe that they can create money and wealth
