Making Of Post War Canada:

Creating Postwar Canada Magda Fahrni, Robert Rutherford, 2008-07-01 Creating Postwar Canada showcases new research on this complex period exploring postwar Canada's diverse symbols and battlegrounds Contributors to the first half of the collection consider evolving definitions of the nation examining the ways in which Canada was reimagined to include both the Canadian North and landscapes structured by trade and commerce The essays in the latter half analyze debates on shopping hours professional striptease the provider role of fathers interracial adoption sexuality on campus and illegal drug use issues that shaped how the country defined itself in sociocultural and political terms This collection contributes to the historiography of nationalism gender and the family consumer cultures and countercultures Cultures of Citizenship in Post-war Canada, 1940 - 1955 Nancy Christie, Michael Gauvreau, 2004-01-15 The years between the end of World War II and the mid 1960s have usually been viewed as an era of political and social consensus made possible by widely diffused prosperity creeping Americanization and fears of radical subversion and a dominant culture challenged periodically by the claims of marginal groups By exploring what were actually the mainstream ideologies and cultural practices of the period the authors argue that the postwar consensus was itself a precarious cultural ideal that was characterized by internal tensions and while containing elements of conservatism reflected considerable diversity in the way in which citizenship identities were defined Contributors include Denyse Baillargeon Universit  de Montr al P E Bryden Mount Allison University Nancy Christie Michael Gauvreau Karine Hebert Carleton University Len Kuffert Carleton University and Peter S McInnis St Francis Xavier University

Development of Postwar Canadian Trade Policy Bruce Muirhead, 1992 Muirhead agrees that any government must work to maximize national income and independent choice He shows that Canada actively pursued a policy of multilateralism and non discrimination as epitomized by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade In addition the government tried unsuccessfully to resurrect commercial ties with the United Kingdom its largest pre war overseas market Muirhead finds that in both these efforts Canada was thwarted by postwar realities that hindered its exploitation of markets in Britain and Western Europe The United States remained the only market able and willing to absorb the billions of dollars of Canadian exports on which Canada's prosperity depended

Making Men, Making History Peter Gossage, Robert Rutherford, 2018-05-01 What has it meant to be a man in Canada Alexander Ross fur trader Percy Nobbs architect fisherman fencer Andy Paull residential school survivor and athlete Yves Charbonneau jazz musician and commune member James black and gay in postwar Windsor Who were these men and how did they identify as masculine Populated with figures both well known and unknown Making Men Making History frames masculinity as a socially and historically constructed category of identity susceptible to variation across time place and social context This examination of historical Canadian masculinities reveals the dissonance between hegemonic ideals of manhood and masculinity and the everyday lives of men and boys The volume showcases some of the best new work in masculinity studies With an introduction that contextualizes the international origins of the field Making Men Making History is the first book to explore these themes entirely in Canadian historical settings

Housing in Postwar Canada John R. Miron, 1988-03-01 The size of Canadian households has been declining since at least the 1880s Miron compares this trend to patterns of household size in England and the United States and argues that postwar changes in household formation in Canada were the result of several forces including the postwar baby boom increased longevity changes in marriage pattern rising incidence of divorce increased household affluence and new forms of government assistance to housing While aggregate growth in population families and households helps to explain why more housing was necessary it does not explain changes in the kind of houses desired Miron discusses changes in available housing stock as well as changes in structural type such as the great apartment boom of the late 1960s and the re emergence of owner occupancy in the late 1970s The types of data available for measuring change in the stock and sources of error in housing data are also analyzed One of the books most important contributions is an annotated synthesis of national trends in household formation and housing demand derived from Statistics Canada census data and accompanied by an insightful analysis of the relation of these trends to housing stock evolution This is the only available detailed study of these topics in the Canadian context

Labour Goes to War Wendy Cuthbertson, 2012 During the Second World War the Congress of Industrial Organizations in Canada grew from a handful of members to more than a quarter million and from political insignificance to a position of influence in the emergence of the welfare state What was it about the good war that brought about this phenomenal growth Labour Goes to War analyzes the organizing strategies of the CIO during the war to show that both cultural and economic forces were at work Labour shortages gave workers greater power in the workplace and increased their militancy But workers patriotism their ties to those on active service and allegiance to the people's war also contributed to the CIO's growth and to what it claimed for workers Drawing on a wealth of archival material Wendy Cuthbertson illuminates this complex wartime context She also shows how the complex often contradictory motives of workers during this period left the Canadian labour movement with an ambivalent progressive conservative legacy
