Health Risk Communication Marijke Lemal, 2012-12-01 Health risk communication deals with planned or unplanned communication to the public about the nature impact and management of a wide array of health threats such as cancer HIV AIDS or influenza pandemics Traditional health risk communication models used to stress a one way flow of health risk messages to the public The dominant focus was on experts government health organizations merely disseminating risk information and educating a lay and ignorant public about health threats However this simplistic top down model of communication ignored the complex nature of the audience and the publics understanding of risk information Fortunately there has been a shift away from top down communication about health threats This book gathers research findings and theoretical reviews with a focus on the role of mass media as sources of health risk information the role of message formats or frames and risk information source characteristics

Risk, Communication And Health Psychology Berry, Dianne, 2004-05-01 This is the first book to clearly assess the increasingly important area of communication of risk in the health sector We are moving away from the days when paternalistic doctors managed healthcare without involving patients in decision making With the current emphasis on patient empowerment and shared decision making patients want and need reliable comprehensive and understandable information about their conditions and treatment In order to make informed decisions the people concerned must understand the risks and benefits associated with possible treatments But the challenge for health professionals is how best to communicate this complex medical information to diverse audiences

Communicating Risk in Public Health Emergencies World Health Organization, 2018-11-15 The recommendations in these guidelines provide overarching evidence based guidance on how risk communication should be practised in an emergency During public health emergencies people need to know what health risks they face and what actions they can take to protect their health and lives Accurate information provided early often and in languages and channels that people understand trust and use enables individuals to make choices and take actions to protect themselves their families and communities from threatening health hazards The recommendations also guide countries on building capacity for communicating risk during health emergencies These guidelines provide systems focused guidance on approaches for building trust and engaging with communities and affected populations approaches for integrating risk communication into existing national and local emergency preparedness and response structures including building capacity for risk communication as required of all WHO Member States by the International Health Regulations 2005 and ERC practice from strategizing planning coordinating messaging channelling different methods and approaches of communication and engagement to monitoring and evaluation based on a systematic assessment of the evidence on what worked and what did not work during recent emergencies These guidelines were developed for policy and decision makers responsible for managing emergencies particularly the public health aspects of emergencies and practitioners responsible for risk communication before during and after health emergencies Other groups expected to use these guidelines are frontline responders local national and international development partners civil society the private sector and all organizations private and public involved in emergency preparedness and response

Effective Risk Communication V.T. Covello, David B. McCallum, Maria T. Pavlova, 2012-12-06 One of the greatest challenges facing those concerned with health and environmental risks is how to carry on a useful public dialogue on these subjects In a democracy it is the public that ultimately makes the key decisions on how these risks will be controlled The stakes are too high for us not to do our very best The importance of this subject is what led the Task Force on Environmental Cancer and Heart and Lung Disease to establish an Interagency Group on Public Education and Communication This volume captures the essence of the Workshop on the Role of Government in Health Risk Communication and Public Education held in January 1987 It also includes some valuable appendixes with practical guides to risk communication As such it is an important building block in the effort to improve our collective ability to carry on this critical public dialogue Lee M Thomas Administrator U S Environmental Protection Agency and Chairman The Task Force on Environmental Cancer and Heart and Lung Disease Preface The Task Force on Environmental Cancer and Heart and Lung Disease is an interagency group established by the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1977 P L 95 95 Congress mandated the Task Force to recommend research to determine the relationship between environmental pollutants and human disease and to recommend research aimed at reducing the incidence of environment related disease The Task Force's Project Group on Public Education and Communication focuses on education as a means of reducing or preventing disease
