Haley, 2011-05-30 In the nineteenth century restaurants served French food to upper class Americans with aristocratic pretensions but by the turn of the century even the best restaurants cooked ethnic and American foods for middle class urbanites In Turning the Tables Andrew P. Creating Consumers Carolyn M. Goldstein, 2012-05-28 Home economics emerged at the turn of the twentieth century as a movement to train women to be more efficient household managers At the same moment American families began to consume many more goods and services than they produced To guide women in this transition professional home economists had two major goals to teach women to assume their new roles as modern consumers and to communicate homemakers' needs to manufacturers and political leaders Carolyn M. Goldstein charts the development of the profession from its origins as an educational movement to its identity as a source of consumer expertise in the interwar period to its virtual disappearance by the 1970s Working for both business and government home economists walked a fine line between educating and representing consumers while they shaped cultural expectations about consumer goods as well as the goods themselves Goldstein looks beyond 1970s feminist scholarship that dismissed home economics for its emphasis on domesticity to reveal the movement's complexities including the extent of its public impact and debates about home economists' relationship to the commercial marketplace Proceedings, American Philosophical Society (vol. 123, No. 1, 1979) , Consumers' Imperium Kristin L. Hoganson, 2010-03-15 Histories of the Gilded Age and Progressive Era tend to characterize the United States as an expansionist nation bent on Americanizing the world without being transformed itself In Consumers' Imperium Kristin Hoganson reveals the other half of the story demonstrating that the years between the Civil War and World War I were marked by heightened consumption of imports and strenuous efforts to appear cosmopolitan Hoganson finds evidence of international connections in quintessentially domestic places American households She shows that well-to-do white women in this era expressed intense interest in other cultures through imported household objects fashion cooking entertaining armchair travel clubs and the immigrant gifts movement From curtains to clothing from around the world parties to arts and crafts of the homelands exhibits Hoganson presents a new perspective on the United States in the world by shifting attention from exports to imports from production to consumption and from men to women She makes it clear that globalization did not just happen beyond America s shores as a result of American military might and industrial power but that it happened at home thanks to imports immigrants geographical knowledge and consumer preferences Here is an international history that begins at home Proceedings, American Philosophical Society (vol. 122, No. 4, 1978) ,
